HUB NAVY SHIPS HUNT FLIERS

Through the gray blanket enshrouding the North Atlantic waters, two big Navy tugs steamed today from the Boston Navy Yard, first of the ships of three nations beginning a hunt for the lost French aviators, Captains Nungesser and Coli. Two sturdy trackers of the sea, the tugs Mojave and Wandank, groped through the fog swirl, one skimming the coast line with Cape Sable as its destination, the other pointing out over the rolling green waste of waters toward the Grand Banks, where the trans-

Both vessels were ordered to keep in close touch with the navy yard communications office and with North Atlantic shipping, as well as with Coast Guard cutters and picket boats in the search area.

"OKEY" O'CONNOR FOUND IN CITY HOSPITAL

William D. "Okey" O'Connor, who failed to appear in Federal Court today to answer charges of mail embezzlement, was found to be a patient at the City Hospital by the Boston Evening American today. Asst. U. S. Atty. Spalding had a Department of Justice agent assigned to find him after Mrs. O'Connor presented a letter signed by City Hospital physician. Spalding told judge Morton he could not find O'Connor at the hospital.

AS THIS IS written New York city, greatest congestion of human beings on the continent, is looking in two directions.

FIRST, out to sea, hoping that a plane reported in the northeast will prove to be that of the brave French flier, Nungesser.

SECOND, toward a jury room on Long Island, where twelve men decided on the electric chair for Mrs. Snyder and a man who helped to murder her husband.

THAT'S A STRANGE mixture of interests, the oldest thing in the world, a murder case, and the newest thing in history, a flight from Paris to New York, without a stop. Undoubtedly ten times as many are interested in the murder as in the flight, and that tells where we are as regards civilization.

RUTH IN 3RD COLLAPSE; MAY ESCAPE THE CHAIR

Long Island City, N. Y., May 10.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder may yet escape the electric chair through a plea of insanity.

Mrs. Snyder, who with Henry Judd Gray was found guilty of murder in the first degree for the slaying of her husband, Albert Snyder, is in a state of collapse in her cell and according to diagnosis of physicians is suffering recurrent seizures that resembles epilepsy, a disease of the brain.

She fainted last night after the verdict was announced and twice again today. She slept little last night and ate no breakfast today.

Epilepsy is recognized by law as legal insanity, it was pointed out today, and points the way for her lawyers to make an appeal to the State Sanity Commission. If she is adjudged insane she would escape the

$60,000 DOPE SEIZED ON SHIP; 3 ARRESTED

Led by Deputies Thomas Flinnan and Owen McKenna, customs inspectors descended on the steamer Malayan Prince at South Boston today, seized the largest haul of opium ever captured in this port and arrested three Chinese. The drug, all high grade smoking opium, is valued at $60,000.

The three Chinese, two members of the coolie crew, are Poo Ah Chung, ship's carpenter; Wong Ah Cheng, boy'n, and Wong Ah Lee. The latter is said to be a prominent New York Chinese. By trailing him on his arrival in this city, the customs men were able to find the drug and made arrests.

The captured drug was contained in 123 cans, each weighing six and two-thirds ounces, making a total of 800 ounces.

According to the customs men they had learned that a huge shipment of opium would probably be on board the Malayan Prince. They searched the ship and found nothing. A constant watch was kept on her, however, and when the New York Chinese appeared the customs

ALL WAVE LENGTHS TO BE CHANGED ON RADIO

Washington, May 10 (I.N.S.).—Wave lengths of virtually all broadcasting stations will be changed in a new national radio setup which will be announced by the Federal Radio Commision in about ten days, Commissioner H. A. Bellows declared today.

Power of many stations will be cut down, and time division will be established in congested areas, Bellows added.

Flight Bulletins!

Halifax, N. S., May 10 (A.P.).—Radio stations along the north Atlantic seaboard, which have been conducting a widespread wireless search for the transatlantic plane of Nungesser, today reported that no word had been received of the French airmen. The weather off the coast of Nova Scotia today was clear with good visibility.

Paris, May 10 (AP).—The French Steamship Paris, which was off the coast of Nova Scotia yesterday en route for New York, today reported by radio that nothing had been seen or heard of Captain Charles Nungesser's trans-atlantic plane in that vicinity despite a wireless search.

Cherbourg, France, May 10 (A.P.).—Destroyers, submarine chasers and seaplanes began a search of the English Channel this morning in view of the possibility that Captain Nungesser's trans-Atlantic plane might have fallen even before reaching the English coast.

London, May 10 (A.P.).—The various shipping companies are anxiously awaiting word from their captains at sea. Captain E. G. Diggle, commander of the Mauretania, the latest arrival in port, declared at Plymouth today that those on his vessel had seen no trace of the fliers.

Portland, Me., May 10 (A.P.).—The coastguard cutter Ossipee left today to patrol the coast from Portland lightship to Cape Sable in search of Nungesser and Coli. The cutter Kickapoo arrived today from Rockland, Me., and is expecting orders to join the search.

Washington, May 10 (I.N.S.).—Secretary of Navy Wilbur sent a message today to Captain R. D. White, naval attache in Paris, asking for suggestions as to how best the navy could aid in the search for Nungesser, as there had been little authentic information after he left Paris.

The following dispatch was received at the Boston Navy Yard late today from the Naval Bureau of Operations at Washington: "The French trans-Atlantic plane has not been heard from. All ships are requested to keep a lookout and report any trace of planes or personnel discovered." At the Navy Yard it was said the dispatch would be broadcast to all ships in local waters.

Ottawa, Ont., May 10 (AP).—Up to mid-afternoon the Canadian Marine Department had received nothing to indicate the whereabouts of the French transatlantic fliers. All lighthouse keepers, wireless men and patrol boats are under instructions not only to keep watch but to be prepared to render assistance to the fliers.

AUTO SKIDS, HITS TREE; 2 KILLED AT MILFORD

Franklin, May 10 (A.P.).—Two North Attleboro men died at the Milford Hospital today from injuries received when their automobile skidded on a wet road here and crashed into a tree.

Curtis Carpenter lived only a short time after the accident and William J. Knowlton, driver of the car, died a few hours later.

At the hospital it was said that Mrs. Mabel Walsh, whose hip was fractured, probably would recover. Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morse, Jr., were slightly hurt.

THE WANDANK LEAVING CHARLESTOWN NAVY YARD

The navy tugs Wandank and Mohave left the Charlestown Navy Yard at 6:45 this morning to join in the search for the "White Bird," the plane of the French fliers, Nungesser and Coli. The tugs will head for the Grand Banks and somewhere in the North Atlantic will join the revenue cutters Tampa and Modoc, already out in the search. Insert is Admiral Andrews, under whose direction the search is conducted.

chair, for the time being at any rate.

Sing Sing Prison, however, was making preparations for the arrival of Mrs. Snyder, who with Gray, will be sentenced to death next Monday by Justice Townsend Scudder.

So depressed has Mrs. Snyder become that jail officials today took precautions against a possible suicide attempt.

Appeals in behalf of the convicted slayers will probably be entered when sentence is imposed.

The only other alternative the pair now have of escaping execution would be commutation of sentence by Governor Alfred E. Smith.

The jury convicted Mrs. Snyder on the first ballot. There was a misunderstanding on the Gray ballot and the vote was taken again and all twelve voted "guilty."

Mrs. Snyder wept as William E. Young, foreman of the jury, announced the verdict. Gray looked directly at the jurors and accepted the verdict with head up, shoulders squared. Mrs. Snyder buried her face in her arms.

The conviction of Mrs. Snyder and Gray was almost a record for speed in Queens County. The murder was committed seven weeks ago last Sunday morning in the Snyder home in Queens Village.

Snyder was beaten unconscious by one or both of the accused, chloroformed and finally choked to death with picture wire.

Mrs. Snyder and Gray were brought to trial within a month. The trial itself lasted about three weeks.

At the Snyder home in Queens Village there was only sorrow today. Mrs. Snyder's mother, Mrs. Josephine Brown, was unable to leave her bed or to eat. She fainted last night when informed of the verdict.

She is being cared for by a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Andrew Brown.

Mrs. Snyder's nine-year-old daughter, Lorraine, was kept in the house today, and, according to Mrs. Andrew Brown, asks repeatedly:

"When is my mother coming home?"

"She has not been told," her aunt explained. "We don't know what to say to her."

The words of the jury "guilty in the first degree" changed the characters of the two main actors in the sordid love drama as suddenly and as completely as though a magician had waved his wand over their heads.

The cold, emotionless Ruth Snyder, the instant the fatal words dropped from the lips of the foreman, became a hysterical woman. In her jail cell she suffered a fit of epilepsy, groveling on the floor, her mouth foam-flecked. A doctor was called from St. John's Hospital just across the way, and even as he entered the cell the woman fell victim to a second attack, which the doctor pronounced to be epilepsy.

He administered the opiates which brought fitful slumber to the Public Service to Give People Facts in the Snyder Case---Rev. R. D. Sawyer

HIGH praise was given to newspapers for detailing, as an example, the "horrible story of Ruth Snyder" during the trial of the case just ended at Long Island City, N. Y., by the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer in a sermon at the First Church in Ware on the topic of "Mothers' Day." The minister said:

REV. R. D. SAWYER

"The newspapers have done us a service by playing up the horrible story of Ruth Snyder, and after a week of the trial we cannot take the time to pay the usual tributes to motherhood, but we must ask ourselves the serious question, 'Is Ruth Snyder an unusual throwback or is she a too common type of the wife and mother of today?' And I think candor forces us to admit the latter.

"Ruth Snyder was caught in the cogs of her habits and outlook. The horror of the wreck of her life should be a warning to thousands of young women who today are merely thoughtless and who tomorrow may be miserable wrecks.

"A generation ago we talked on the menace of young men sowing wild oats, but today we have a thousand-fold greater menace, that of young women turning their greater freedom to license and burning up their possibilities of life.

"I am glad the newspapers played the matter up.

"We should ask, 'How many are there going the same road over which "Ruth of the Death Room" traveled?'"

TUGS AND PLANES HUNTING MISSING FRENCH FLIERS

land Division of the Coast Guard, said today that he has ordered all Coast Guard patrol boats to abandon the rum patrol temporarily and to search for the missing fliers.

From Portland, he ordered out the Coast Guard cutter Ossipee. The destroyers Jewett and Davis of the Coast Guard fleet are already out on the search, having left Boston last night to join with the cutter Tuscarora, on patrol duty.

Because of the remoteness of naval craft from the Nungesser route, the President directed Secretary Mellon to issue instructions to coast guard vessels in the North Atlantic to use every effort in prosecuting the search.

Shortly after noon, and after the tug Wandank had put into Gloucester because of the fog and then pone out again when it lifted, it became known that the destroyers McDougal and Ammin had been ordered into the North Atlantic for the hunt to relieve two others of the destroyers that were running short of fuel.

The Coast Guard cutters Modoc and Tampa are already in the North Atlantic on ice patrol.

Meanwhile airplanes stood ready at the Boston Airport and at the Naval Base in Squantum, to take the air in a search should the mist and fog be melted away, and it was understood British warships will join with French battle craft in a search to cover the entire ocean path plotted by Coli.

Not since the intrepid fliers hummed out over the sea off the coast of Ireland early Sunday with the sun glinting on the silvery white of their big biplane have they been sighted.

False report after false report came through that the flyers had been seen passing certain points but each successive report was refuted subsequently or the plane proved to be some other than that of Nungesser, the "Ace of France," and his fellow war aviator, Coli.

More than 48 hours have elapsed since they took off to the cries of enthusiastic thousands, from the Bourget flying field outside Paris—confident that they would be in New York harbor yesterday not later than 5 p. m.

Voluntarily enlisted in the hunt today are the liners Comrcnia, of the Cunard Line, the Westphalia of the Hamburg-American Line and the George Washington of the United States Lines, together with the freight steamship West Apaum.

These ships have all gone off their courses to search the sea for the lost aviators, but there are scores of other craft on which re-

'Wild Jungle Beast' ~ And 'Her Man of Steel'

DOOMED TO DIE! Drawings by Nell Brinkley show Ruth Brown Snyder gripped by the cold terror of doom as the agony gnaws at her fibres; and Henry Judd Gray resigned to pay with his life for his crimes. They have reached the end of the road. Disgraceful death is just around the bend. She has suffered a series of collapses since the jury fixed her fate. Her icy glare and iron nerve have melted under the scorn of the prosecutor who called her a "wild jungle beast" and Gray "her man of steel."

'Sex No Cause For Leniency'

The verdict against Mrs. Ruth Snyder, awaiting death in her cell in the jail at Long Island City, is approved by women of Boston.

The Boston Evening American today sought expressions of sentiment on the death sentence that was virtually pronounced by the Long Island jury. Without exception these sentiments expressed satisfaction with the finding of the jury.

Among those who expressed themselves were:

MRS. FRED PIGEON, East Boston, president Boston City Federation of Women's Clubs—The Snyder-Gray verdict was a just verdict. Maybe it will serve as an example to others in this age when the pendulum is swinging so rapidly in the direction of drunkenness and all kinds of fast life. I hope the verdict will point a warning finger to other women and young people on the downward slide. The whole thing was so rotten—their love pretense—it was disgusting. But justice has reaped its reward.

MRS. OSCAR C. GALLAGHER, Brookline, president Alliance of Unitarians and other Liberal Christian Women—The verdict in the Snyder-Gray case is a just one. Although, personally, I don't believe in capital punishment, however, since it is required in New York, the verdict was just.

MRS. KATHERINE P. CLARKE, Brighton, publicity chairman Women's Democratic Club of Massachusetts—The Snyder-Gray verdict was justice personified. I don't see how a jury could have done anything else but return a verdict of first-degree murder. It was expected.

MRS. SADIE LIPNER SHULMAN, Dorchester, assistant corporation counsel of Boston—From what I read of the Snyder-Gray case I was thoroughly convinced that Mrs. Snyder was guilty of first-degree murder. I was pleased that the jury found her so and did not hesitate to mete out relative punishment for so atrocious a crime. Both she and Gray were guilty and I was pleased that the law did not allow the woman any maudlin sympathy.

MRS. ROGER CUTLER, Needham, former Selectman of Needham, Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts: "The verdict is just. The woman is not entitled to any more sympathy because of her sex. In fact, she is less entitled when she is the wife of the murdered man. There is nothing I hold for her. No one with any common sense could. The Snyder-Gray verdict is just.

FEAR HUB MAN, DEAD IN OHIO, WAS SLAIN

Toledo, O., May 10 (A.P.).—L. J. McCarty of Toledo, O., salesman for the General Alloys Company of Boston, was killed last night when he either jumped or fell from a fast New York Central train, one mile west of Holland. The body was found on the tracks by a farmer.

Charles J. McCarty, an auditor at City Hall and a brother of the dead man, believes his brother was the victim of a murder plot. Late today he announced he would ask Superintendent Crowley to conduct an investigation.

According to the brother he received two telephone calls from Lawrence, one from Chicago on Saturday night and another later from Kanosha, Wis. In both of these messages the brother declared he was being followed—that his life was in danger and he feared death.

McCarty, in his duties as general secretary of the General Alloys Company of South Boston, was in the habit of travelling extensively. The head of his concern, Henry H. Harris, was married in Detroit on April 20 and McCarty attended the ceremony. Before returning to Boston he planned to call on a number of his company's leading agents. He was plentifully supplied with money.

The two telephone messages in which he said he was being pursued by a secret agency were a mystery to his brother. In neither of the messages did McCarty give any clue as to the identity of the foe that was pursuing him.

Officers of the Alloys Company as well as the brother of the dead man do not believe he ended his own life.

$3,000 LIFTED OFF HUB BANK TELLER'S DESK

A daring daylight robbery at the Huntington avenue branch of the Atlantic National Bank, which occurred on May 4, became known today.

The thief, reaching into the cage of a paying teller while the latter was gone, got only four bank notes but the total of their denominations was $3,000. There were two $1,000 bills and two $500 bills stolen, according to the report made by bank officials to the police.

News of the robbery was carefully hushed while agents of the William J. Burns Detective Agency worked with the police in an effort to find the thief.

It is understood that two descriptions have been broadcast, but the detectives are said to be unsatisfied that either fits the thief.

It was during the rush period just after the noon hour that the robbery occurred. The branch bank is at No. 288 Huntington avenue and hundreds of business men in the Massachusetts avenue section make their deposits during the early afternoon.

The bank was crowded when the thief approached the teller's cage. The teller left the cage, his desk heaped with money. When he returned the four bills were missing. On account of the large denomination of the bills the theft was discovered almost immediately.

Officials of the bank today declared they believed the thief had used a cane to abstract the money from the cage.

$2,800 LOAD OF FURS STOLEN

An automobile truck containing furs valued at $2,800, besides valuable gowns and dresses, was stolen from in front of the Statler Hotel in Park square.

The furs and other articles were entrusted for the cleaning plant of Mayburn, Inc., in Cambridge, having been collected by the driver, Roger F. Plummer.

The truck was driven away while Plummer was in the hotel to make other collections. Plummer told the police that contrary to his usual custom he left the ignition key in the switch when he left the car to go into the hotel. He was absent only three or four minutes, he said, but police broadcast the numerals of the truck registration plates, 181,384, which is a light Ford delivery truck bears the name of the concern on its sides.

DOG BITES 3 IN EAST BOSTON

A mad dog at large at Condor and Meridian streets, East Boston, caused a near panic today when it bit three persons before it was finally trapped in an alleyway and shot by the police.

The three victims of the crazed animal were:

Clare Cunningham, aged 17, No. 322 Meridian street, East Boston, bitten on the right hand.

John Blanchard, No. 645 Columbus avenue, Boston, bitten on the left hand.

Cecil Crovell, No. 139 Falcon street, East Boston, bitten on the leg.

The victims of the dog were first treated at the East Boston Relief station and were then removed to Boston City Hospital.

Another youngster was bitten by a dog in the yard of the Chapman School in East Boston. The victim is William Maria, aged 11, No. 286 Meridian street. The boy was climbing over the school yard fence when the dog bit him on the leg. He was treated at the East Boston Relief Hospital.

OKEY O'CONNOR IS SOUGHT IN MAIL THEFTS

A Department of Justice agent has been assigned to find William D. "Okey" O'Connor, amateur baseball league umpire and former postal clerk, who failed to appear at the Federal Building today to answer to an indictment charging him with embezzlement from the mails.

O'Connor was arrested a few weeks ago by postal inspectors in the main postoffice with 100 letters. It is charged, in his possession and after a grilling is alleged to have confessed the theft of 200 letters weekly over a period of six months.

Today his wife presented a letter to Asst. U. S. Attorney John V. Spalding, written on City Hospital stationery, which said O'Connor was suffering from hernia and faced an immediate operation.

Spalding telephoned the hospital to check up some details in the letter, but was informed that there was no patient there of that name.

The Federal attorney informed Judge James M. Morton, before whom O'Connor was to appear, of the conflicting circumstances connected with his non-appearance in court and the judge agreed with Spalding that an investigation be made by the Department of Justice.

SCHOOL PARADE ROW BREWING AT CITY HALL

A fine row is smouldering at City Hall over the question of allowing the Boston School Cadets to hold their annual parade through the downtown streets, the last of this month.

The board of street commissioners, who hold the authority to issue a permit, are disposed to grant the permit. The final decision will have to come from Mayor Nichols.

A year ago after many conferences with Mayor Nichols and the retail board of the Chamber of Commerce, it was decided no more parades should be held in the retail district because of the effect on business. At that time a schedule of short uptown parade routes was fixed upon.

The school cadets' parade takes place in the morning and three-quarters of an hour is allotted to it to pass a given point. The retail board is much opposed to downtown parades.

Whether or not Mayor Nichols will pass his approval on the downtown parade of the schoolboys is a question on which a decision is awaited, not only by the street commissioners, but by the retail trade board as well.

Judge John Duff of the Boston Municipal Court does not approve of petting—at least not in his courtroom.

During a session of his court today an ardent swain, seated on a bench in the rear of the room, placed a caressing arm about the waist of the girl who was with him.

"This is no place for hugging and spooning," the judge thundered from the bench.

"We'll have none of that stuff here."

The young man removed his arm from the girl's waist.

Washington, May 10 (I.N.S.).—The Red Cross relief for flood relief funds crept toward the $10,000,000 goal today.

Contributions tabulated up to 10 a. m. totalled $9,751,830, and confidence was expressed that the ten million will be in before nightfall.

Hundreds Fight New Cuts in Flood Levees

New Orleans, La., May 10 (A.P.).—White-capped billows of the Mississippi River cut deeply into levees along a fifty-mile front north of Baton Rouge yesterday and last night and today hundreds of laborers were sand-bagging the weakened spots.

Along the Bayou Des Glaises levee, where danger has centred several days, 500 citizens were fighting the flood.

As the situation there hourly grew more critical, Major John C. Gotwals, engineer, in charge of a rescue fleet with its base at Natchez, Miss., announced that all boats in his area except those needed for transportation of food and supplies, would be concentrated in that section.

Throughout the lower valley tension was increasing and patrols were more vigilant. New Orleans was considered out of danger.

Thousands of persons between New Orleans and Old River were threatened.

In addition to the waves at Bayou Des Glaises, seepage was causing damage at Morganville. Waves were reported to be splashing over the top of a dyke there.

The crest of the Red River passed Alexandria and a slight recession was noted. The Ouachita crest has passed Monroe, in the Tensas basin, waters pouring through the Cabin Tesia and Winter quarters crevasses steadily increased in volume. Newellton was reported from two to three feet deep in water and St. Joseph also had more than two feet.

NEW EVIDENCE IN SACCO CASE IS RUMORED

A hint that new evidence derogatory to Sacco and Vanzetti had been placed in Governor Fuller's hands caused a mild flurry today among sympathizers of the condemned men.

Professing to be fearless of any such "evidence," members of the Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee said if there is something of this nature in the hands of Governor Fuller, it should be made known to Attorney William G. Thompson, counsel for Sacco and Vanzetti.

"The place for new evidence is in the courts, or, at least, where it can be controverted by the defense," committee leaders said. They added that they did not believe there is any such evidence favorable to the prosecution.

MAY MEAN GUN.

The rumor arose from a letter sent to a Boston newspaper by a man who signed himself "Charles F. Durham, Cambridge," Although this letter gave a hint of the nature of the so-called evidence, persons actively connected with the case speculated that it might refer to tests made with the "Sacco gun," to show the death bullet came from it.

"I am afraid those who believe in Sacco's innocence will have a rude awakening when the report on the evidence which the state has," ran one sentence of Durham's letter.

A radiogram from Amsterdam, received today at the State House, read:

"Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions, Amsterdam, representing 200,000 workers, appeals with the utmost earnestness against execution of Sacco and Vanzetti."

A definite stand by Governor Fuller regarding the Sacco-Vanzetti problem is expected this week by the Defense Committee.

DISPUTE OVER BENCHLEY

Many persons closely associated with the committee believe that an investigation has been in progress for some time under the direction of Attorney General Reading and Frank A. Brooks, chairman of the Parole Board, the Governor's usual investigators in matters of this sort.

The dispute over the affidavit of Robert Benchley, New York dramatic critic, who quoted a friend to attempt to prove Judge Webster Thayer made prejudiced statements during the trial, was continued today when Governor Fuller received a letter from Joseph J. Glancy, Boston newspaperman.

Glancy declared Loring Coes of Worcester, the man quoted by Benchley, told him that he could not remember what Judge Thayer had said, although he remembered it was a conversation.

This letter to the Governor was intended to offset a statement contained from Coes in which he made an unqualified denial of what Benchley had sworn to.

The Rudolph Valentino Club of Brooklyn came to the defence of Sacco and Vanzetti with a telegram urging Governor Fuller "to approve a new trial." The usual batch of mail, for and against the condemned pair, reached the State House today.

of 800 injured, many probably fatally.

Hundreds were homeless in five states visited by a series of freak storms that started Saturday and reached a climax yesterday when large areas were devastated in Arkansas, Missouri, Texas and Illinois. Torrential rains added to property losses estimated at millions of dollars.

Arkansas led with 100 known dead and 250 injured in the wake of tornadoes that swept from the southern section of the State to the northeast counties. Lawrence County was hardest hit, at least 75 perished there and approximately 200 were injured. Eighteen were dead and 10 unaccounted for at Strong and Northfield in Union County, while eight were killed in Cleveland County.

Seventy-three persons were known to have been killed in a dozen Missouri communities. Fifty-four died in a tornado that razed the business section of Poplar Bluff in Southeast Missouri. Relief workers had placed 69 bodies in morgues while 12 bodies were taken to homes in the damaged residential district.

GARAGE IS ROBBED IN SOUTH BOSTON

Using a favorite trick of sneak thieves, two youths today robbed the Broadway Garage, on Broadway, South Boston, of $7, making their escape in a light blue sedan.

The pair drove up to a sidewalk gasoline pump on the sidewalk and while an attendant filled the tank, one of the men entered the garage office and emptied the cash drawer. This man was about 5 feet tall, 130 pounds and wore a gray top coat and light hat. No description of the other man was furnished.

MRS. SNYDER WILL FIGHT DEATH CHAIR VERDICT

GRAY, RESIGNED TO FATE, GLAD HE TOLD 'TRUTH'

woman who has but few more nights to sleep.

By the same magic Henry Judd Gray was changed. This man held up as a weakling showed far more nerve than did his fellow murderess.

The instant he reached his cell Gray packed up all his clothing, did them up in a neat bundle, and presented them to the sheriff to do with what he pleased, saying, with a trace of a smile: "I guess I won't have much use for these now."

Then he called for pencil and paper and immediately began writing his farewell letters, wholly unconscious of the fact that a doctor and a matron were giving drastic treatment to the woman who was condemned with him in her cell.

Only the protests of counsel for the condemned pair prevented the passing of sentence when the jury returned its first degree verdict against the former sweethearts. Justice Townsend Scudder finally announced he will sentence the pair at ten o'clock Monday morning.

The twelve men were out just one hour and fifty-nine minutes.

READS PRAYERBOOK

Mrs. Snyder, standing up to hear the verdict, dropped in her chair and covered her face with her hands. Henry Judd Gray, standing not far from her, held himself stiffly erect for a moment, but more like a man who had been shot and was swaying ever so slightly for a fall, then sat down, pulled a prayer book out of his pocket and began reading it.

He kept on reading, even while the lawyers were up at Justice Townsend Scudder's bench arguing with the court against immediate sentence of the little corset salesman and the blonde woman. Mrs. Snyder sat with her face buried between her hands.

Then Gray put the prayer book back in his pocket and sat looking straight ahead of him as if he had found some comforting passage in the word of the Lord.

"I told the truth, and my conscience is clear," he said to Henry Massa, chief deputy of the sheriff's office, on the way back to the jail. My mother is glad I told the truth, and God Almighty knows I told the truth."

"Oh, I thought they'd believe me —I thought they'd believe me," moaned Mrs. Snyder to Father Patrick Murphy, when she met him in the hallway going back to the jail.

They have a curious custom in New York state of taking the prisoners before the clerk of the court after a verdict is returned and setting down their "pedigree"—age, occupation, habits and the like. John Moran, the clerk of the Queens County Court, sits in a little enclosed booth like a bank teller's cage, just in front of the judge's bench, and Mrs. Snyder was asked to step up there.

Mrs. Irene Wolfe, the matron of the courtroom by the same path she has trod so often the past couple of weeks. She was pretty thoroughly beaten at that moment, and small wonder, for she had just heard men tell her she must die.

Gray stood up before Moran still holding himself stiffly, but he did not weep. In answers to one of the set questions as to whether he is temperate or otherwise, he said temperate, which sounded somewhat ironical in view of Gray's testimony during the trial as to the prodigious amounts of liquor he consumed.

Mrs. Snyder, standing up to answered in a low voice—Ruth Brown Snyder, 32 years old, born on Manhattan, and all that sort of thing. Married? A widow. The tears began trickling down the marble white cheeks.

Then they finally took her out of the courtroom by the same path she has trod so often the past couple of weeks. She was pretty thoroughly beaten at that moment, and small wonder, for she had just heard men tell her she must die.

Gray stood up before Moran still holding himself stiffly, but he did not weep. In answers to one of the set questions as to whether he is temperate or otherwise, he said temperate, which sounded somewhat ironical in view of Gray's testimony during the trial as to the prodigious amounts of liquor he consumed.

He too, was finally taken away, still walking as if he had put a ramrod down the back of his coat to hold himself so. Henry Judd Gray had said he expected such a sentence, and he was not disappointed.

AIDS MRS. SNYDER

The pair probably knew they were gone when they received word to make ready to return to the courtroom in such a short time after the jury retired. Rumor had tossed the verdict pretty well around Long Island City and the courtroom. When the announcement came that the jury was ready to report, the verdict was a foregone conclusion.

A few hours' delay might have produced hope for one or the other of the man and woman that fate tossed together with such horrible result.

There was a big crowd in the courtroom which had been there since the jury retired, but nothing like the jam of the afternoon when the arguments were being heard. There were many vacant seats in the rows with their pew-like benches, but persons came running in from out of the street when word passed that the jury was ready.

Most of the lawyers were on hand. But Samuel L. Miller, of Gray's counsel who had gone to the Elks' Club for a bite to eat and had to be hunted up. As he came in a bailiff bawled "absolute silence!" Then the jury came filing into the dimly lighted courtroom.

There was a rainful wait, and in came Mrs. Snyder and Gray, the former between two matrons, Mrs. Wolfe and another, and Gray between two guards. Attorney Edgar Hazelton of the woman's counsel, came in with her, and had evidently gone out to steel her for the verdict.

He knew what it was, no doubt of that. She walked in with her little quick, short steps, but her face was gray—not white—gray, a dull sickening gray.

The man walked firmly, too, but you could see by the expression in his eyes that he felt what was coming. He seemed to be holding himself together with a strong effort.

DELIVER VERDICT

Now a stir told of the coming of Justice Scudder. He peered around from under the green shaded stand lamp on his desk with an inquiring expression, and as the roll of the jurors was called they answered in very low voices.

Only one said "here" rather loudly almost defiantly.

The clerk of the court motioned the jurors to stand and then Mrs. Snyder and Henry Judd Gray were also told to rise. They stood there, Mrs. Snyder just behind Gray, leaning against a table. Gray had no support. They could not see each other.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?"—the old formula, and William Young, the foreman, said "yes." He was the first juror chosen after scores of talesmen were examined.

He had no relish for his task today, as he recited in a low voice into the strange silence of the dingy, old room.

"We, the jury, find the defendants Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray guilty of murder in the first degree."

Martha Brooks to Speak

Representative Martha N. Brooks of Gloucester will be one of the principal speakers at the May luncheon meeting of the council on women and children in industry, the advisory committee for the assistant commissioner on labor and industries, at the Women's Republican Club on Friday.

Jurors Believed Gray's Story; Knew Ruth 'Lied'

NEW YORK, May 10 (A.P.).—All the jurors who convicted Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, East Orange, N. J., corset salesman, of first degree murder for the killing of Mrs. Snyder's husband, Albert Snyder, knew that the widow lied in her testimony, according to a juror, who refused to allow the use of his name.

"There was little doubt in any of our minds as to what the verdict would be," he said.

"I could tell by the way Mrs. Snyder answered the questions put to her on the stand that she was not telling the truth. We all believed what Gray said."

On leaving the courthouse in Long Island City, the jurors, who had been virtual prisoners for the past two weeks, learned for the first time of the flood that is sweeping the South and the attempted non-stop flight by Nungesser from Paris to New York.

COSMOPOLITAN PAYS 92 P. C.

Judge Braley in the Supreme Court today authorized Bank Commissioner Roy A. Hovey, to pay a final dividend of 2.04 per cent, to the creditors of the savings department of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company. This dividend calls for the sum of $117,006.02 and will be distributed among about 12,000 depositors. The dividend will make a total of 92.04 per cent. The creditors of the commercial department have received 36 per cent, and before the close of the present year the bank commissioner expects to declare a final dividend.

Cheaper Gas Asked

A reduction in the price of gas charged by the Marlboro-Hudson Gas Company and the elimination of the service charge was asked for today by selectmen of Hudson, Maynard and Stow.

O'HARA BATTLE IS ON AGAIN

Mayor John E. Walsh of Revere today began a new phase of his fight to keep Thomas J. O'Hara from returning to his former position as police lieutenant.

Ordered by Judge Michael H. Sullivan to make the reinstatement, Mayor Walsh responded today with a petition in the Supreme Court for a writ which, if granted, will result in a review of Judge Sullivan's decision.

The Revere mayor claims that O'Hara's petition for reinstatement was not filed within the time prescribed by law, that there are errors of law in the findings of Judge Sullivan, and that the justice failed to make any rulings on certain questions presented to him.

Following the order for reinstatement, O'Hara announced that he intended to take the examination for police chief. Mayor Walsh replied to this by saying that he would reinstate Chief Dyer, recently removed from office, rather than see O'Hara as chief.

PARIS MOB IN NUNGESSER FRENZY HOOTS DOWN 'OLD GLORY'

PIN WRONG WEATHER REPORT ON U. S.; PAPERS BURNED

Paris, May 10 (A.P.).—The French foreign office was semi-officially consulted by a representative of the American embassy today regarding the feeling manifested toward Americans and circulation of rumors that inaccurate American weather reports misled the French transatlantic fliers. A representative of the French government said the authorities would intervene to stop the circulation of such rumors.

Paris, May 10 (A.P.).—The crowds which hung about the streets until early morning were thoroughly angry because of the loss of Nungesser and Coli, and there was some evidence of anti-American sentiment.

Not only did they burn copies of the newspapers which had deceived them into the belief that the aviators had won, but a gathering in front of the office of Le Matin hooted and jeered and demanded that the American flag, which had been hoisted alongside the French tricolor, be pulled down. The authorities at first refused, but when the attitude of the crowd became more menacing, both flags were lowered.

It was said that weather reports had sent Nungesser and Coli off, when in fact conditions were not propitious for the attempt. This intensified feeling to the extent that a number of Americans expressed the hope that the Bellanca plane would not attempt to make the New York-to-Paris hop at the present juncture.

There was another manifestation in the early hours in front of the office of the Paris edition of the New York Herald-Tribune in the Avenue De L'Opera, where shouters charged the paper with deliberately withholding confirmation of the aviators' arrival merely to belittle the French achievement.

The scene was an angry one until a French employe of the paper explained the situation and the crowd was persuaded to disperse.

The government was asked today in the Chamber of Deputies to fix a date to discuss an interpellation on the origin of the false news and "the commotion caused in French public opinion." The interpellator, General Girod, chairman of the military affairs commission of the chamber, will demand full details from the ministries affected.

PARIS OPTIMISTIC.

Despite the fact that nothing authoritive has been heard concerning the airmen since they passed out over the coast of France Sunday morning, Paris is still optimistic that no real disaster has come to its two heroes. The consensus is that they have been forced to the ocean's surface by fog somewhere near the Newfoundland or Nova Scotian coast.

The French government is taking nothing for granted and has ordered the naval authorities to make a thorough search of the English Channel and vicinity in the possibility that the airmen were forced down before really getting started on the long voyage.

Marseilles, France, May 10 (A. P.)—Captain Coli's mother is bearing up bravely in the absence of news as to the safety of her son, navigator for Captain Nungesser in the French Paris-to-New York flight. Seen at her home in the Joliette quarter of Marseilles, residence of seafaring men, she said:

"I have always prayed for the safety of my son when he was on a perilous adventure, and I have never ceased since I knew he had left on the Atlantic flight.

"He writes me I am leaving. Pray for me. Your prayers always keep me out of danger.' He is a son of the sea and is religious like most men who follow the sea."

Opportunity knocks daily in the Help Wanted Columns of the Classified Ads. Classifications 50 and 52.

"Nungesser Tried the Impossible," Says Flier

Halifax, N. S., May 10 (A.P.)—Captain Charles Nungesser made "the mistake" of endeavoring to fly his machine the entire distance himself, in the opinion of Major A. S. Shearer of the Royal Canadian Air Force, who arrived here from Ottawa in company with Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of National defense.

The Major said he considered it a physical impossibility for one man to pilot an airplane across the Atlantic for 40 hours, as the pilot of the "White Bird" set out to do.

MOTHER IS SURE NUNGESSER IS TO COME BACK

Paris, May 10 (AP)—Captain Nungesser's gray-haired mother broke down when friends told her that the first reports that her son had reached New York safely were erroneous. The strain of sleepless nights had told on her, and she is extremely nervous.

Yesterday afternoon, when reports that the plane had been sighted off the Newfoundland coast were accepted as true, she wept quietly in her excess of relief.

"I can't help crying," she told the newspaper men. "You know, I haven't slept for two nights. What mother could—even if she knew, as I knew certainly, that all would be well?

"What I want most of all is for him to be back here for my birthday, May 30. He promised me he would, and I know he will keep his promise."

Today, with all the world waiting for news of the fate of Nungesser and Coli, she was still confident that her son, France's great war ace, would come out of his adventure with flying colors, even if he did not reach his goal by air.

Thousands Change Hands on Flight Bets in France

Nice, France, May 9 (A.P.).—Thousands of dollars changed hands today on the strength of a premature announcement that Captain Nungesser had reached New York safely. A majority of the winners were Americans, with Italians and British predominant among the losers.

The Riviera has seldom seen such a public demonstration as last night, when special police details forced the crowds away from the newspaper bulletin boards and endeavored to protect newsboys from over-eager purchasers.

One bet against Nungesser's safe arrival at New York was $5,000 at even money.

LOSING HOPE FOR FRENCH AIR ACES

tra lookouts have been posted in the hope that the white ship of the air may be sighted floating on the rolling sea.

According to specifications of the plane given out just before the hop-off, its fuselage—or longitudinal compartment in which the aviators sit and in which the motor, fuel tanks and various supplies are carried,—was made watertight and is capable of floating without leakage, in all but the heaviest storm, for at least twenty-four hours.

The gasoline tanks themselves, if empty or if emptied by the aviators, would serve to keep the craft in greater buoyancy also.

Food and Water

Food in concentrated form, and a water filter from which drinking water can be obtained from sea water, is carried on the plane.

The one great worry among experienced airmen today was whether or not making a "landing" on the long ocean combers, the plane might not hit at a wrong angle and tip over.

Nungesser would have had to come down on the tips of his fuselage with a prodigious lap because the ship carried no pontoons.

Boston waited for the fliers all day yesterday, and many began the grim wait again early today, despite the fact that it seems hopeless.

At 4 o'clock yesterday, when it was reported that the "White Bird" had been sighted, thousands sought vantage points on roofs and wharves. Steamships in the harbor prepared to blast a welcome from their sirens, while planes soared out of the East Boston airport and Squantum to escort the daring airmen over Boston.

This word at four o'clock had come from Portland, and was flashed all over the world, the message saying that the plane had been seen off the Maine coast going by at high speed.

Throughout the day there came reports from various sections of Southern New England and Canada that the "White Bird" had been sighted, but in each case the report proved erroneous.

GIVES UP HOPE

At five o'clock when the Portland messages was exploded waiting Boston gave up hope, even though Paris was celebrating at the moment.

Many of the planes that had intended to be but an escort became searchers, sweeping through the fog-blanketed skies as far from their base as they dared in search of the missing plane.

The first erroneous report came from the French possession, curiously enough, the little island of St. Pierre. Then three other reports, all greeted hopefully, followed in quick succession, only to be proved untrue almost as soon as the thousands had taken their posts on roofs and planes had soared out to meet the visitors.

Thousands thronged the Battery in New York and tried to pierce the fog that blanketed the bay in hope of seeing the "White Bird" circle the Statue of Liberty. France waited. Great Britain waited. The whole world waited. But still no word. Occasionally a flash that the big ship had been sighted at various points on the American coast from Newfoundland to down. But each time it turned out to be some other ship and hourly the fear that disaster had overtaken them grew.

PARIS IN DESPAIR

Paris and all France is gripped in despair. Despair that follows excitement and celebration. For late Monday afternoon the boulevards of Paris were thronged with people celebrating the great victory.

Nungesser has spanned the Atlantic. The newspapers in extra editions said so.

Then the hours brought word that the news was false and grief took the place of joy. Minister of War Painleve and Nungesser's mother sobbed with the rest of France.

When it became evident that Nungesser would not make the non-stop flight from Paris to New York, Clarence Chamberlin and Lloyd Bertaud made preparations to hop off for Paris this morning in their Wright-Bellanca plane, Columbia, but weather conditions forced them to give up the idea.

Hopeful ones believe that the two daring Frenchmen may have made a landing on one of the icefloes that stud the North Atlantic, and if there is any ground for this belief there is the chance for rescue.

It is expected that several Canadian craft will join the American ships in the search.

Nungesser Search Is Halted by Fog Blanket

No effort will be made by United States Army fliers to search the coast for the Nungesser-Coli plane until the fog blanket lifts, according to announcement made today by Major Ira Longanecker, army air chief for New England.

The army has two planes ready for flight at the East Boston Airport. These will be sent scouting along the coast in search of the missing fliers the moment visibility in the air clears.

"It would be impossible for our fliers to accomplish anything if they took the air in this weather," said Major Longanecker. "The moment the fog lifts our planes will go in the air and will search the coast line. It would be foolhardy to attempt anything now."

Find No Trace of Lost Flier on Hop to Brazil

Rio Janeiro, May 10 (A.P.)—Another day has passed without word of Captain Schindler and his companion, Commander Mouneyres, French aviators, who started on an attempt to fly across the Southern Atlantic from St. Louis, West Africa, to Pernambuco, Brazil, Thursday.

A high official of the foreign office told the Associated Press today the government has taken no measures to search for the aviators because, since the flight was made against its wishes, the French authorities had made no such request.

"White Bird" Builder Suggests Search Inland

Paris, May 10 (I.N.S.).—Pierre Le Vasseur, builder of the "White Bird," today expressed the belief that search should be made at inland points in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia for Captain Charles Nungesser and Captain Coli.

"All the searching should not be done at sea," said Le Vasseur. "It was Coli's intention, if he encountered too much fog on the other side to head inland. They may have landed in Newfound-land or Nova Scotia."

TWO DOCTORS NAMED TO POSTS BY BIGELOW

Commissioner of Public Health George H. Bigelow today appointed Dr. Derrie Parmenter industrial medical consultant and Dr. Carl R. Deering statistical consultant.

Dr. Parmenter is in charge of the industrial clinic at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Instructor of industrial hygiene at Harvard Medical School, medical advisor of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, and member of the New England Association of Industrial Physicians. Dr. Deering is an instructor in vital statistics, Harvard School of Public Health.

DE PINEDO STILL HELD UP BY FOG IN NEW YORK

New York, May 10.—(A.P.)—Francesco De Pinedo, Italian aviator, was fog-bound today and could not say when he would resume the Boston-to-Philadelphia hop of his four-continent flight. He will wait for a clearing of the fog which twice forced his Santa Maria II. to land yesterday.

Duke of Leeds Dead

London, May 10 (A.P.).—The Duke of Leeds (George Godolphin Osborne) died in London today. He was treasurer of the household, 1895-96, and served for a time as lieutenant in the Yorks Hussars. He was born in 1862 and married Lady Katherine Lambton, daughter of the second Earl of Durham.

SPREE MAY LEAD TO DANCE BAN AT WESLEYAN

Middletown, Ct., May 10 (A.P.)—In an effort to prevent a repetition of conditions here over the week-end when many students were said to have been using liquors, the administration committee of Wesleyan University has recommended discontinuance of the senior dances for this year and also for next, unless the college senate can propose "effective regulations for use during the dances and afterwards."

The recommendations to the faculty were announced by President James L. McConaughty at chapel today. They will be acted upon within the next few days.

Many of the college fraternities hold their Spring parties last Friday night. The following morning there was considerable evidence of drinking in the way of empty bottles and grouchy students, it was reported to the faculty. Two students and a former student were injured in an automobile accident, but police declared that there were no indications of intoxication among the three and no signs of liquor.

President McConaughy said today that one student had been dismissed from college and that another, now, away, would not be permited to return because of "drinking incidents" over the week-end.

The administration committee in its recommendations did not wish a curb on social activities, but felt drastic measures to curb drinking should be taken to preserve the good name of the institution.

NAVY FLIER IN 33,455 FEET SKY RECORD

Washington, May 10 (I.N.S.)—Lieutenant Carleton C. Champion, navy aviator, has broken the world's altitude record for seaplanes with a climb of 33,455 feet, it was announced today.

The record was made at Hampton Roads, Va., in a Wright single-seat fighter plane but announcement was withheld until officials of the National Aeronautical Association could make a check.

OLD N. E. FOGGY 'OUT,' NEW ONE ON HIS TOES

"The old-fashioned New Englander has been rung out. A new type, who is on his toes all the time, has come in," said Alfred W. Donovan, president of the E. T. Wright Company of Rockland, in addressing the Advertising Club of Boston at the weekly luncheon in Hotel Bellevue today.

"He tells the truth about New Englander and has so much to tell that he hasn't time in which to tell it," continued the speaker.

"For twenty-five years New England has advanced every year in the size of its payroll, in the numbers employed. Don't let them scare you into believing New England is going backward. It is not; it is going forward very steadily.

"Although certain people are saying the shoe industry in New England is going to 'the dogs,' the firm of which I am president will sell more than $25,000,000 worth of shoes this year and most of these retail at from $12 to $15.50 a pair. The astounding part of the thing is that the high-priced end of our business is constantly increasing as we sell three times as many high-priced shoes as we do low priced or medium priced goods.

"Price has no bearing on the acceptance of an article if it is right. Every New England manufacturer should use New England territory as a laboratory and if his goods are acceptable here they will sell elsewhere.

"The success of our product, of course, could not have been attained without newspaper advertising. It would have been impossible for us to have made the strides we did had we not entered the advertising field. Although they tell you that the shoe business in New England is going to the dogs we have made a tremendous increase in our sales in the city of New York during the past year."

Revere's Chief Exam Put Off for Big May 19 Fight

The Maloney-Sharkey fight, scheduled for May 19 in New York, today interfered with Civil Service examinations for police chief of Revere.

These examinations were today announced for that date. Acting Chief Tappan, nervously fingering two tickets for the big fight, which he had paid good money for, telephoned to Mayor Walsh and requested a change.

After hearing from the Mayor, the Civil Service Commission agreed to make the examination date May 18.

'BAR RUM MEN FROM OFFICE'—MRS. PEABODY

Providence, May 10 (A.P.)—"Men who undermine the foundations of the republic to bring back in some form the most dangerous enemy, morally and politically, that this country has ever known, the legalized liquor traffic, are themselves dangerous enemies to all law and should be debarred from any office in State or Union," asserted Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, of Beverly, Mass., chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, in the keynote speech with which she opened the committee's third national convention here today.

"We will not and need not longer tolerate private or public attacks on the constitution of the United States by men who are in office or aspire to office," Mrs. Peabody continued. "Neither will we tolerate inefficiency on the part of the government in enforcement of law. In spite of the determined fight against the 18th amendment, it is here. It will not be repealed. It shall not be annulled."

Mrs. William Tilton of Cambridge, Mass., warned against decentralization. Nation-wide action for nation-wide evils in this respect no state boundaries is the only efficient thing today, she said.

State Senator Belle Kearney of Mississippi said the Republican party, realizing the wet and dry question will be the dominant political issue of 1928, will follow the clarion call of Senator William E. Borah in a defense of the Constitution.

BIG HARMONICA PARTY TONIGHT AT THE 'MET'

Tonight is party night at the Metropolitan Theatre for registered entrants to the Harmonica Contest conducted by Borrah Minevitch under the auspices of the Boston Evening American. Are you going?

There's really no reason why you shouldn't if you're a New England boy of 10 to 19 years, and can play the harmonica.

Of course the contest isn't until tomorrow night, so that even if you are so unfortunate as to miss out on Minevitch's party tonight, you still have time to file your entry.

Above all, don't be too timid. Some New England boy is due to get the crown, the prize imported harmonica, and an offer to join Minevitch's band. Don't have regrets afterwards that you didn't try for it. If you can play, go to it.

Remember you still have time to file your entry before the party today.

BETTY ALDEN ON SOCIETY

Interest Turns to Braggiotti Dance Review Program

SUCH HOURS OF "TRYING on" gorgeously fantastic costumes as the Younger Set is putting in! It is a pastime to which many a daytime hour is devoted, as the afternoon and evening of the Braggiotti "Review of Dance" on Friday, May 20, moves nearer on the calendar. So many Smart Set girls, sub-debutantes, post-debutantes or debutantes are in the Review it's a foregone conclusion that doting parents and admiring friends in the upper circles will more than fill the Repertory Theatre for both performances.

BRAGGIOTTI APPEARANCES always smack of the new and unusual in dances as well as exotic and barbaric backgrounds for the youthful dancers. Miss Isabel Thorndike is the epitome of both fantasy and beauty in a cleverly adapted "snake" creation, sinuous and jungle-like, impersonating smoke rising from a votive offering. There is a background of East Indian incense burning figures for Miss Thorndike's number.

A STAR RISING IN A GLIMmer of blue and silver, such is the creation that comes from an inspired designer to clothe the supple gracefulness of Miss Miriam Winslow. "Corals" as one number is called brings to mind all manner of tropic brilliance, of coral islets on palm fringed seas. Miss Agnes Boardman and Miss Virginia Curtin, Miss Deborah Sayles, Miss Ellen and Miss Olga Frothingham are in "Corals."

"GYPSIES" IS ALL SUB-DEButante; really sub-sub-debutante, in a way. For Susanna Minturn, Mrs. J. Hampden Robb's small daughter is in it. Also Isabel Lawrence, Mrs. John S. Lawrence's little girl, and Mary Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Howard L. Rogers. Miss Janet Gray, Miss Jean Ferguson, Miss Patricia Pierce, Miss Bobsie Ellsworth, Miss Helen Marshall and Miss Polly Powers are in the Gypsy number also.

MISS NANCY HALLOWELL, SMALL DAUGHTER OF MRS. J. Mott Hallowell is in one dance the Misses Braggiotti have created and named "Soaring." And for the very little ones Miss Francesca is preparing a pretty and amusing thing. She has in it Mrs. Henry Sprague's little daughter Sue and Mrs. Charles Lund's Nancy, also Anstiss Dana, Eleanor Petri and Josephine Murray. "Gypsies" promises life and barbaric color, to the clink of bracelets and the flash of staccatto heel.

MISS LINDELL FISHER IS AN INTERESTING AND ATTRACTIVE debutante-to-be who precedes a future coming out with a European interlude of travel. She is one of the party now on the high seas with Mrs. Lucy Lillie, and Mrs. Lillie is the maternal parent of that very attractive young woman, Lady Peel, known perhaps to a wider circle as Beatrice Lillie of the stage. Mrs. Lillie is aboard the Cameronia sailing to Scotland and will motor through Scotland on her way to home in London. She is taking home to England the small Sir Robert Peel, son of Lord and Lady Peel.

YOUNG BUDDING PLAYWRIGHTS FROM THE "47 WORKSHOP" plan to move in a body, almost, to the Repertory Theatre on Friday next when their brother (and sister) playwrights (also in the budding stage), present three plays with amateur casts. Two are original and one an adaptation from a short story, and all three are the fruit of the pen of Repertory Workshop students. The matinee is to be very pleasantly started off with an informal luncheon, and afterwards a cup of tea in the theatre's cozy library is in order.

POWERS-THAT-BE IN THE REPERTORY CLUB AFFAIRS, SUCH as Mrs. Joseph W. Courtney, Miss Grace I. Elwell and Mrs. Cyrus Dallin, each with a certain artistic metier of her own, are much to the fore in making ready for the matinee. Some very interesting and original dances and some Indian music accompany "Fantasma." "Ancestral voices" is a sophisticated Society playlet and the third is "A Woman of Character." A smart audience will be in attendance, and many members of the Harvard Dramatic Club, the latter, of course, present in a pleasantly critical capacity.

ONE OF THE POLO MOUNTS AT DEDHAM ATTRACTING MUCH attention from the gallery is Corazon, the nimble footed mount favorite of B. Nason Hamlin. Mr. Hamlin and Corazon will appear regularly in the polo matches that commenced last Saturday, between Dedham men and Harvard's polo'sts and continue tri-weekly throughout the season. It is an opportunity to see the old-time polo stars, such as J. Dudley Clark and William Cameron Forbes, in action once again, and there is as well a galaxy of rising young Crimson stars.

Specially posed for the society editor of the Boston Evening American.

21 AWARDS AT RADCLIFFE

Radcliffe College has awarded twenty-one fellowships and scholarships for graduate study during the year 1927-28, it has just been announced by Dean Brown. Only four are to undergraduates, candidates for their A. B. degrees this June and one of these, Anna Faull, Radcliffe '27, of Cambridge, has received the Harvard Annex Scholarship for work in botany. Oliver Dabney Scholarships are awarded Hope Kane, Brown '27, of Pontiac, R. I., for study in history; Katherine Burton, Mt. Holyoke '27, of Trumbull, Ct., for graduate work in English; and Dorothy Mason, Wellesley '27, for study of international law.

Three of the twenty-one recipients will study abroad through the Augustus Anson Whitney and Benjamin White Whitney Fellowships. They are Margaret Gay, Brookline, who took her A. B. and A. M. at Radcliffe in 1922 and 1923 respectively. She will do further work in the field of economics; Elizabeth Waterman, who has already spent one year in London working in economics, and Angeline Lourasso of Rochester, N. Y., whose field is romance languages.

Those who will continue work at Radcliffe under the Whitney Scholarships are E. Elizabeth Jones, of Boston, Marine Leland of Cambridge and Elsie Van Dyck DeWitt of New London, Ct.

Whitney Fellowships for foreign students have been awarded to Elizabeth Behrens of Sussex, Eng. and Jeanne Rosselet of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

A Whitney scholarship has been given to Ruth Crosby of Arlington, Mt. Holyoke A. B. in 1919, Radcliffe A. M. in 1920, whose subject is Physics.

Five young women who have received the Jones and Augusta Bernard Fellowships all to continue at Radcliffe are Vera Micheles of Cambridge, Mrs. Mildred P. Wentworth of Northampton, Agnes Rindge of Grand Rapids, Mich., Kathleen Hurford of Jamaica Plain and Irma Reed of Cambridge.

Miss Jessie Tresmon of Portland, Ore., receives the only Louisa Green Bursley Fellowship. The Rosamond Freeman Fellowship has been given to Doris Stevens of Aurora, N. Y.

A fourth Oliver Dabney Scholarship will go to Laetitia T. Bolton, New York.

DANIEL CHESTER FRENCH GIVEN MEDAL OF HONOR

New York, May 10 (A.P.).—Daniel Chester French of New York and Rockbridge, Mass., dean of American sculptors, has been presented with a medal "of honor by the National Sculpture Society.

It is the first of its kind ever awarded and was presented because of French's "outstanding achievements in sculptural art and his leadership in the profession."

Among Mr. French's most noted works are the statue of Abraham Lincoln at Washington, his statue of the Minute Man of Concord, at Concord, Mass., and the statue of John Harvard at Cambridge, Mass.

FULLER MUST STAY HOME

Governor Fuller's injury is much more serious than at first believed, and it will be four or five days, at least, before he is back at his desk.

This was the news brought away from the Governor's home today by officials who visited him for conferences.

They reported that the tendon, at first thought to have been strained, is broken and must knit together before the Governor can trust his weight upon the foot. At present it is very painful and he cannot place any weight upon it without wincing.

Graves Confirmed

The reappointment of Edward G. Graves to the Boston statistical department by Mayor Nichols was today confirmed by the civil service commission.

MAN SHIPPED ON ICE 1,000 MILES INTO BOSTON

Sam McGee, who, according to Robert W. Service, was so cold that he complained of the draught when the crematory door was opened on him, was outdone today by David Green, aged nineteen, a resident of Hamilton, S. C.

David leaped into an iced refrigerator car at his home town last Saturday night. A friendly "brakie" turned the lock.

Today David, embalmed and preserved as carefully as King "Tut," was hauled from the refrigerator car in the South Boston yards of the New Haven Railroad.

Railroad employes hustled him to a bunk room. They turned on all the steam available. They stuffed paper in the cracks of the doors and windows until the place resembled a Turkish bath. They heaped gunny sacks, old coats and a dozen hastily procured horse blankets over the petrified form.

Finally the citizen from Hamilton, S. C., showed semblance of life so the police were summoned.

Later he was taken into Municipal court on the charge of vagrancy. He presented such an abject figure that Judge Duff placed him on probation and ordered the probation officer to get him a job.

According to the man's story he boarded the refrigerator car intending to go to Richmond. The car was led to receive a load of greens at Richmond but the orders were changed so one Green became "the load of green," and the car, without being opened, was sent to Boston instead.

Mile after mile of new owners—anywhere—any place in a good used car. Choose yours from the many fine offerings in today's Classified Ads. Classification 150.

CHINA WARFARE IS RESUMED

Shanghai, China, May 10 (A.P.).—Fighting in China's Civil War is being resumed on several fronts after a long lull.

General Chiang Kai-Shek, head of the Nanking Nationalists, is in contact with northern forces in Anhwei Province along a line from Puchowfu, north of Lake Chaohu, to Hochowan, on the north bank of the Yangtse River below Wuhu.

Fighting has also been resumed in Honan Province, where the northerners have occupied Chumatien, 150 miles north of Hankow on the Peking-Hankow railway.

EX-MAYOR WEDS WIDOW IN WEST

Los Angeles, May 10 (A.P.).—Edward R. Hathaway, former Mayor of New Bedford, Mass., and Mary L. Snow, also of New Bedford, took out a marriage license here yesterday. The marriage will take place Thursday or Friday, the couple said. Mayor Hathaway gave his age as 53 years and Miss Snow said she was 44.

New Bedford, May 10 (A.P.).—The Mary L. Snow whose approaching marriage to Edward R. Hathaway, former mayor of this city, is announced in Los Angeles, is Mrs. Mary Louise Snow Underwood of New Bedford, Waldo E. Underwood, her husband, who was a guard in the House of Correction here, died in February.

CHAPLIN ON STAND IN $50,000 PLAGIARISM SUIT

New York, May 10 (I.N.S.).—Charlie Chaplin was on the stand in Federal Court today as a witness in the $50,000 suit for alleged plagiarism brought against him by Leo Leeb, a former marine, who claims Chaplin's film, "Shoulder Arms," was pirated from "The Rookie," a manuscript he wrote and submitted to the comedian's script readers.

Chaplin told the court he was absolutely unable to see any resemblance between "The Rookie" and "Shoulder Arms."

MacDonald Nearly Well

Philadelphia, May 10 (A.P.).—Ramsay MacDonald, former British Prime Minister, has almost completely recovered from the severe attack of throat and nose affection which has kept him in the Jefferson Hospital since April 27. He hopes to leave the hospital Friday.

Shackled Souls

Author of "Chickie"

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

Roen Roes, at 13, is left by her father's death with her mother and a small brother. She has promised her dying father to take care of both of them. Roen, now 18, goes with Jackie, aged 9, to the Gloucester shore. The two peer into a dance hall and the girl sees there a man whose appearance she likes.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.)

CHAPTER 2

IN the first glimpse when the blue, bonny eyes met hers, he seemed a being conjured from the music of the soft Summer night—young, sweet, laughing.

Now he was abashed, knowing he had seen her tears. As he stood there blocking the narrow path, she said hurriedly: "Oh, did you see the moon come up that way?"

"Why, yes," he answered, surprised and pleased that she spoke. He noted the dark eyes, the beautiful eagerness of her strong, sweet mouth. He always looked first in a girl's eyes, then at her lips. If he liked these, he looked a long while. For he was a blithe young troubadour. "I saw the moon. Did you think it finer than other nights?"

She nodded dreamily. "I never saw it so big and burnished before, you see," she added, giving a frank, singing, laugh.

The breeze caught her flying chestnut hair. She passed with a chiming "Well—good night!"

Under the chuckling laugh he felt her wistful yearning. He stared after her, fascinated.

His was deeply touched, for he was Michael Scott—Celt and poet, melancholy and gay by turns, quick to laugh and quick to weep, but whatever his mood mightily enjoying it. "Ah," he thought, "poor darling." And remembered the girl had wondrous eyes.

Roen went quickly, a little breathless and excited, to the porch where she and Jackie slept. All about her in the rhythmic dark pulsed the still, deep joy of the night.

How wondrous to be here—a mute, eager breath of it—to reach out to sea and sky. She closed her eyes and flushed, recalling the youth's blue, joyous gaze and that it dwelt warmly on her face. How odd it was, coming upon him so. And sweet—intensely sweet.

This whole day had been the very happiest. For instance, when she was getting the dinner, Dearie suddenly said: "Ah, Ronnie—what a blessing you are—what would life be without you!" Said this and smiled thrillingly the way she used to long ago for Bobby-dad. Roen trembled, thinking: Oh, she's getting better—surely!"

Five years Roen had awaited the hour when her mother would put away her grief, when she would let in the sun and joy of life again.

In those first desolate months after Bobby-dad's death, the little girl tried pathetically to cheer her mother. She would come in carrying the little boy. She would set him down, dressed up in Dearie's long skirt with the bustle, her feathered hat. She would wriggle for him. And he would prance up and down, jouncing the bustle, grinning impishly. "Look at him," Roen would demand. "Isn't he adorable? Smile, Dearie, please."

But Dearie sat with her pretty face blankly veiled, pressed against her eyes. Every day she had long crying spells.

After Maggie left it was much worse. Then Roen had all the work to do. She lost six months at school. Aunt Carrie, who was Robert's sister, said it was a mortal shame. She said: "Your mother could pull herself together if she wanted." And she went on a rampage when she found that all the insurance money

BOY WOULDN'T WORK.

The case itself was insignificant, as Municipal Court Judge John Prizzo, nineteen, of Lowell street, West End, was on trial for being idle and disorderly. The boy wouldn't work. He was in with evil companions and he finally was arrested on Saturday night.

The judge heard the testimony of the officers, Patrolmen Edward Dervan and James Leonard. As the stories told of the youth's neglect and abandonment of his mother the anger of the judge arose. When the officers had finished the mother endeavored to intercede.

"Your Honor, he's my boy and—"

"Just a minute," the judge announced. "I have something to say to this young man," and then the torrent of oratory was unloosed from the judicial lips.

IN JAIL ON MOTHERS' DAY.

"Sitting in a cell in the Charles Street Jail on Mothers' Day," he began.

"This old, broken mother at home alone, crying her eyes out about you. A bouquet of thorns pressed tight against her heart—that was your gift to her.

"The walls of the Charlestown prison beckon to you, young man. That will be your end," the judge continued.

Then turning to the mother, in a more kindly voice he said:

"There he is, mother. Take him home with you. As low and despicable as he is, he is still your boy. You can see him as the tot who played about your knee. You see him as the playful boy with all the world before him. I see him in a different light, and may Heaven help him if he comes into this court again.

"Court is dismissed."

'Sitting in Cell on Mother's Day'

HEARTLESS BOY SCORED BY JUDGE

Two Boston policemen were among the throng who wiped tears from their eyes in Municipal Court today when Judge Michael J. Murray rose to inspiring heights of oratory in admonishing a wayward youth whose derelictions landed him in the Charles Street Jail instead of with his aged mother on Mothers' Day.

The mother was in the court—she attempted to intercede for her boy, but Judge Murray silenced her until he had finished. There was not a dry eye in the court room when the judge had ended. One woman became hysterical and had to be carried from the room.

GOVERNOR OPENS HUB CABLE

"Hello, Old England."
"Hello, New England."

With greetings from Governor Fuller to Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister of England, the first direct cable from Boston to London was opened today at the fifth annual New England Trade Conference held at the Chamber of Commerce.

Secretary of State Frederick W. Cook, representing the Governor, sent the first message to England's Prime Minister. Mayor Nichols sent the second to Lord Mayor of London. Flight messages were flashed to London and given answers were flashed back.

The Boston to London direct cable service is now in operation.

AMONG THE GUESTS.

Among those present at the opening exercises were Victor M. Cutter, president of the United Fruit Company and president of the New England Export Club under whose auspices the trade conference is held.

Ex-Mayor Andrew J. Peters, president of the Chamber of Commerce, Walter Bucklin, president of the National Shawmut Bank; George E. Maynard, president of the Atlantic National Bank; W. P. G. Harding, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank; Gordon Dexter, of the First National Bank, all sent messages to London, while 100 delegates from the leading manufacturing plants in New England looked on. Miss E. Baker, export manager of the A. C. Lawrence Leather Company of Boston, was chairman of the ceremonies.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Governor Fuller's message to Stanley Baldwin:

"New England greets Old England for the first time by direct cable as Governor of Massachusetts I express to you the pleasure of our citizens upon the establishment of an additional facility, which, let us hope, may still further stimulate the friendly relations of our peoples."

Mayor Nichols cabled:

"May this cordial greeting over the first direct cable from Boston to London inaugurate a still closer friendship between our two municipalities."

After the cable opening, the trade conference opened, with G. W. Hebenstreit, export manager of the Florence Manufacturing Company, as chairman. Eugene N. Foss, president of the B. F. Sturtevant Company, spoke on Canada; T. F. Stokes, of the Hood Rubber Company, on Mexico, and H. A. Mequeen, United States commercial attache, on Chile.

Ross brought the conference to its feet when he launched into an attack on the Republican platform declaration and the Bois tariff, blaming the Home Market Club among other things for the present depression in the cotton business.

He attacked the stand-pat attitude which, he said, had been prevalent in New England for 75 years. He said the very thing which prevented the cotton industry then is killing it now.

The New England Export Club meeting was scheduled for 4 o'clock. After that a dinner, attended by all the delegates, will be presided over by Mr. Cutter as toastmaster. Today's conferences is to discuss export trade problems.

EVERETT MAD DOG VICTIM SPURNS RABIES SERUM

Benjamin F. Earle, of Quincy, and George Jennings, of Everett, disagree that rabies in dogs is "the bunk." To prove it Earle offered to allow a mad dog to bite him. Jennings didn't make such an offer, but he got bitten and to maintain his disbelief in rabies he refuses to allow doctors to give him the Pasteur treatment.

Jennings and Dr. Edward F. Manning, city veterinarian, were called to kill a dog that had been acting queerly. While attempting to enter the dog, both were bitten.

The dog's head was sent to the State laboratories at Boston and it was found that the animal had been afflicted with rabies. Dr. Manning immediately submitted to the Pasteur treatment while Jennings scoffed at the idea that he could catch the disease from the dog.

State health officials who scent a row in controversy with Earle over the liberty of a newly aerial existence are watching with interest the developments in the Jennings case.

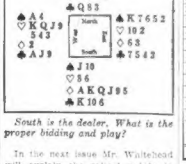
HAND NO. 62



South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy." I. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Trick 3. East shifts to Diamonds and leads low from three to the Ace up to Dummy's weak cards, as apparently the best possible play in a situation that offered no well-defined lead.

Trick 6. South, marking East with the Ace of Diamonds, puts Dummy in with the ten of Spades for a lead of Diamonds.

Trick 7. East must go up with the Ace of Diamonds, because if the Diamonds are equally split and South has the Queen, refusal to do so would enable South to establish a long Diamond in Dummy for a good needed discard. Moreover, a Heart shift now is clearly marked by West's discard of the seven of Hearts on the third round of Spades assuring the driving out from Dummy of the Ace of Hearts, his only entry for the making of a long Diamond, if such should be established.

ELIOT ACCEPTS CALL TO BIG HUB CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association for twenty-seven years, today accepted a call to the pastorate of the Arlington Street Church after presenting his resignation as president of the association to the board of directors in session at the new association headquarters, No. 25 Beacon street.

Dr. Eliot asked that his resignation become effective September 1, when he expects to take up his new duties. He will succeed the late Rev. Dr. Paul Revere Frothingham.

Dr. Eliot has served on the staff of the American Unitarian Association, the central administrative agency of the Unitarian churches, since 1898, when he was chosen secretary. In 1900 he was elected president and has headed the association since that time.

Twice before during this period, Dr. Eliot was called to prominent Boston pulpits. First was that of Edward Everett Hale at the South Congregational Church, and later to the First Church in Boston. Both of these invitations he declined, feeling that the condition of the association did not permit him to relinquish the responsibilities he had undertaken as its president.

"I was trained to be a parish minister, and that has always seemed to me the work most worth doing in the world," said Dr. Eliot. "I am happy that the confidence of my friends at Arlington street permits me to use the years of activity that remain to me in the kind of public service I love best."

The son of the late President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University, Dr. Eliot was educated at Harvard, receiving his A. B. degree in 1884 and his A. M. in 1889.

AIMEE CROCKER PLEADS FIFTH DIVORCE

Paris, May 10 (A.P.).—The divorce action of Princess Natalie Galitzine, wife of former Aimee Crocker, against the Prince, charging unfaithfulness and abandonment, was pleaded today.

The case was heard in Camera, but it is understood a letter written by the Prince's mother figured in the Princess' case. Decision is expected next week.

The Princess Galatzine, who has been much in the news because of her marital exploits, is 52 years old. She married the 27-year-old Russian Prince in Paris on Sept. 22, 1925. It was her fifth venture on the matrimonial sea.

This California heiress, daughter of Judge E. R. Crocker of Sacramento, first married Porter Ashe. A year later she was divorced from him and married Harry Gilig, who was reported to have won her hand at cards.

Then came another divorce and she married Jackson Gouraud, while her daughter married Jackson's brother, Bowers Gouraud. Later she went through the divorce court and married Prince Mishkoff. After their divorce she took her present husband.

The Red Signal ~ Ultimatum ~ By Homer Banks

ROGER'S ULTIMATUM—Rosalind stepped back, startled. "Locked her up for murder?" she repeated incredulously. "Oh, it can't be possible!" Roger placed his arm about her. "Let's not discuss it, dear," he pleaded. "Everything will come out all right." Rosalind drew away. "But I must see her," she cried, puzzled at Roger's attitude. "This is the time when she needs me." Roger's lips tightened. "As her attorney," he said firmly, "I have forbidden her to see you!" For a moment there was complete silence. Rosalind stood as if petrified.

ROSALIND IS BITTER—Roger, the man she loved, making this statement? Rosalind searched his face closely. But it was adamant. "I am sorry to take this attitude," Roger was saying, "but it is necessary under the circumstances, dear." Rosalind started to leave the room. At the door she paused. "If this is your attitude," she said bitterly, "I never want to see you again."

ADELAIDE'S HELP SOUGHT—Roger hurriedly summoned Adelaide. Briefly he explained to his sister what had transpired. "Rosalind is terribly upset," he said. "She has been through more than most girls could ever stand. We must send her away until the trial opens. I'll need her as a witness, then. Your show closes this week. Why can't you take her to the White Mountains for a rest? It would do you both good. But remember," he warned as Adelaide nodded her assent, "under no circumstances must she see Helen!"

"THE TIME HAS COME!"—Roger had succeeded in getting an early trial. The entire city, aroused by the murder of the wealthy Samuel Manton, clamored for its sensations. Helen Martin was widely proclaimed as the "mystery woman" but no amount of perseverance on the part of the reporters could penetrate the veil. On the night before the trial Roger telephoned Adelaide. "The time has come," he said. "Bring Rosalind back to the city." (Continued Tomorrow.)

U. S. TO GO OUT OF BUSINESS IN PHILIPPINES

Manila, May 10 (A.P.).—The government is going out of business in the Philippines and its holdings in commercial enterprises, involving about $50,000,000, will be sold to highest responsible bidders.

This was announced by Governor-General Wood to the Associated Press today as he outlined a new policy of withdrawal. The policy is occasioned by a recent ruling of the Insular Supreme Court, in effect that the sleeping chamber of Miss Lillian Gaunt, 78, Whitman street, early today, and after arriving her shoulder was found on the floor, when her screams awakened her sister Clarice.

GIRL'S SCREAMS ROUT BOLD BOUDOIR BANDIT

Lawrence, May 10 (A.P.).—Making his second attack on women within a week, a "Boudoir Bandit" entered the sleeping chamber of Miss Lillian Gaunt, 78, Whitman street, early today, and after arriving her shoulder was found on the floor, when her screams awakened her sister Clarice.

Governor Wood handed control of the Manila Railroad Company, one of the corporations in the group, over to the Philippines a few months ago by giving the stock to the Philippine Legislature. Management of the company was left in native hands.

Government buildings will be disposed of as quickly as possible. Interests to be sold include the great sugar centrals in Oriental Negros and Occidental Negros provinces, formerly owned by Spanish friars; the Manila Railroad Company, capitalized at $20,000,000, parts are owned by those slated for disposal.

ACTOR KELLY PINS LIFE HOPE ON ALL-WOMAN JURY

Los Angeles, May 10 (U.N.S.).—Orral Kelly, screen player on trial for murder, is staking his chances of acquittal on a jury composed mostly if not entirely, of mothers. Ten women, most of them mothers, and some with sons of Kelly's age, were in the jury box in Superior Judge Charles S. Burnell's court when the trial was resumed today.

The remaining two tentative jurors were men, but Defense Counsel Max Steuer still had four challenges with which to manoeuver for an all-woman jury. Kelly is accused of having used his lure-ties to kill Ray Raymond, musical comedy star.

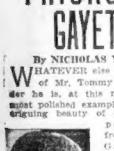
STAGE ∾ SCREEN ∾ MUSIC

SILENT 'BOZO' FRISKS AT GAYETY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

WHATEVER else may be said of Mr. Tommy (Bozo) Snyder he is, at this moment, the most polished example of the intriguing beauty of silence. His pantomimed frolic at the Gayety is rather indifferently stifled "His own Show," though last night he was called by any other name it is fun and melody undoubtedly would have been just as sweet to the ear and as teasing to one's sense of humor. Without regular intervals of "Bozo" to alleviate the storm and stress of burlesque enjoyment the merry playgoers would be bitterly limited to five and-ten-cent store recreation. There is nothing like that, at least, when Mr. Snyder is concerned with the proceedings.

The value of a soft voice is often mentioned in high places; the joy of an absent voice, and the absence is accompanied by the genuinely artistic pantomime of your own popular choice, is something not to be measured by ordinary standards. And yet Mr. Snyder is not totally His Own Show by any means, though there is enough of him to keep a house full of good customers rocking with laughter. Silence may be golden but in the case of Tommy Snyder it is unmistakably riotous. There never was a time when an honest laugh was not worth its price in the coin of the realm and Snyder sees to it, most energetically, that His Own Show is obviously a bargain proposition in good cheer.



Rae Davis.

Supporting Mr. Snyder is a group of players well versed in the art of making nimble entertainment something to be taken with an open heart. For all his dumb nonsense, and it rolls in waves through the piece, Mr. Snyder stands after profound thanks to Sam Green, a buxom bit of masculine humanity who does all the talking for both. On the stage they are inseparable, an arrangement that may be fairly called both satisfactory and eventful.

And, also, of course, there are the rosebuds who make burlesque allurious the irresistible eye. Twenty-four of them, if you have the mind to make calculations, and every mother's daughter of 'em as frisky as kittens. More than ample charms, dedicated to the display of feminine charm, keep the picture in proper focus. Frolicsome leaders in this fraction of the show are Rae Davis, Fannie Palmer and Beatrice Tracey—an animated trio, toiling faithfully and well.

Based on theatre values, however, with everything else tossed into the ultimate reckoning, Mr. Tommy (Bozo) Snyder sets up a new record for gaiety in the obstreperous drama.

BASEBALL FILM EXCITING AT THE STATE

By LEO GAFFNEY

With "Slide, Kelly, Slide!" those smart film fashioners, A. P. Younger and Edward Sedgwick, have hammered out a hit that strikes an audience just right. Though there are none of the subtle deceits that lay lightly on the tender sensibilities of the fussy reviewer, and while its humors come down with a hard, solid stamp, there is, nevertheless, much a covert blending of plausibility and hokum that you just have to rise with the rest at Loew's State and join in with the cheering.

William Haines.

Even the sounder sleeper can find nothing to lull him in the action of this film, for it plunges along with the speed found only in a well-knit continuity. The beginning presents the central character, a bush-league pitching sensation, and the ensuing sequences develop him in a quick succession of incidents that place him on top of the world as the hero of the Big Series.

This ballplaying kid is interesting. He is Jim Kelly, alias William Haines, considerable of a wise-cracker and with an honest crush on himself; first, because he doesn't know any better and then because he really can pitch that baseball better than anybody else. This phase of young James is absolutely sound.

Where Mr. Kelly starts to slop over is in his adoption of a freckle-faced little ragamuffin, who, during the final series game, prays devoutly in the grandstand that his hero may win. This sob stuff, however, is neatly turned to good account by a caption writer who has the boy say, "Please God, give Jim a little bingle—and if you can't do that give Saint Louis an error."

For sweet romance's sake there is an easy wooing of Sally Neill as the fair daughter of a veteran catcher. Harry Carey plays the grizzled vet and does him to the very life. Little Junior Coghlan appears as the prayerful young one; Karl Dane makes funny faces as a thick-skinned outfielder and other roles are suitably handled.

On the State stage Tommy Christians' orchestra is playing its second week, and Mr. and Mrs. Murray afford the spectators entertainment and instruction in the intricacies of ballroom dancing.

Grim Pyorrhea gets 4 out of 5

All around you are people doomed, through carelessness, to contract Pyorrhea. Four persons out of five past forty(and many younger) are its victims.

Carelessness—neglect of teeth and gums—is the cause. And the results, too often, are loss of teeth, neuritis, rheumatism, or other serious diseases.

And yet, if you start in time, it is so easy to prevent. Six years ago I started twice a year. And start using Forhan's for the Gums.

Used regularly and in time, Forhan's prevents Pyorrhea or checks it. It firms the gums and keeps them healthy. It protects teeth and keeps them white.

Ask your dentist about Forhan's, the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S. It contains Forhan's Pyorrhea Liquid, used by dentists in the treatment of Pyorrhea.

In Tender Role

BELLE BENNETT
Ploys title role of Mother in the Kathleen Norris film story at the Scollay Square.

SMART COMEDY AT ST. JAMES

"The Little Spitfire," a brisk comedy-drama of show folk, which earlier in the season had a run downtown, was presented in stock last night for the first time in Boston, at the Keith-Albee St. James.

The addition of Houston Richards to the cast, a Boston boy who has returned to the company after a two-season's tour as the comic lead in "Rose Marie," made the performance something more than just an opening of a new play. And the audience was in the high humor that greets the return of old friends.

The action of "The Little Spitfire" whirls around a pert little chorus girl with a "temper." When she elopes with the scion of a millionaire there are the inexorable family tiffs that always furnish amusement for those on the shady side of the footlights.

Naturally enough, the boy's mother is the chief combatant. Sharp bickerings pass energetically back and forth, but the quick-thinking "shorties" more than holds her own. And then, in the inevitable way of stage romancing, the wrinkles are finally smoothed away, an irate hero pummels a sleek villain, and all ends sweetly.

The principal roles are handled capably by Walter Gilbert as the rich boy; Ruth Shepley in the title character, and the supporting parts are taken by Houston Richards, Jack Westerman and Edith Speare.

MYSTIC FILM AT ORPHEUM

Five distinct characterizations are enacted by Gloria Swanson in "The Love of Sunya," the feature picture on view at Loew's Orpheum this week. In this mystic film, with its countless surprises, Miss Swanson appears as a reincarnated Egyptian girl of long ago, a modern young American flapper, a struggling school teacher, a temperamental prima donna and the wife of a millionaire.

Needless to say, Gloria is seen to advantage in each of the roles. "The Love of Sunya" is a story of conflicting love and ambition and is filled with mysticism of the seers of ancient Egypt.

Julian Hall and his jazz band, together with his Broadway flats, a talented group of song and dance artists, headed by Hyra Dexter, head the vaudeville offerings this week. Mr. Hall is very much in evidence on the bill, for he also appears with Kathleen "Red" Dexter in a rollicking comedy, "What's Matter?"

Bob Archer and Blanche Belford present an original humorous number called "The New Janitor." While other entertaining acts are Ed Clark and Phil Valiant in "The Income Tax," Mabel Drew in song sketches, with Paul Humphrey at the piano, and the Three Londons, frollickers.

EXCELLENT VAUDEVILLE BILL AT KEITH'S

William Faversham, who year in and year out has been one of America's favorites of the speaking stage, supported by a talented cast, presents a comedy "The Sponge" as the headline act on the bill at B. F. Keith's this week.

At the opening performances the bill was received with merited acclaim by capacity audiences.

Owen McGiveney, the quick change artist of the stage, presents an act, "Bill Sikes," in which he plays all the parts and changes his costume with a rapidity and a completeness that is remarkable.

Sybil Vane, a prima donna who is extremely easy to look at, has a voice that is just as attractive.

Fifteen very blonde and good looking girls assist Mr. and Mrs. Harry Girard in a snappy musical revue tabloid. The Dixie girl, Ann Suter, also has a clever act. Hoey and Gould display extraordinary ability in a comedy turn.

Fay and Jarge it is one of the best balanced bills that has appeared at Keith's this season and vaudeville devotees who attend will have nothing to complain of.

'JUDY' RETURNS MERRILY TO TREMONT

"Judy" came back last night to sing and dance for Boston. She started her musical comedy career here some months ago, made a short stay of it, waved a jaunty good bye with a promise to return as soon as she could, and here she is again with the same silhouette two-step, Smith and Cruze's and Purcell, leading the same kicksome chorus.

She wasn't at all bashful, know she was among friends and sailed right in to begin an evening of it. There was matters down in Greenwich village that called for expert attention. A little girl was turned out of her home by a hard-hearted step-father. That was the necessary touch of drama.

A pleasanter place was immediately found at Mrs. Maguire's and that was the point "Judy" burst into song. Four fine boys vied for her hand and, after dancing about among them, she chose the best singer. Here were your lilting song numbers.

Then in the inescapable point of musical presentation, when the heroine and hero become acquainted for that poignant five or ten minutes you winked back an unbidden tear or two, but you were through it dozens of times before, knowing everything is going to be all right in the ballroom or so. And that was your necessary heartthrob.

Deftly administering to this emotional change of pace were the amiable habitues of the village, Miss Smith and Mr. Purcell flirted with each other in song and teased each other in the dance; Lida Kane as the nimble-witted Mrs. Maguire heckled all in the heavily Celtic fashion of the joke books, and everyone else did a full chore in a brisk entertainment.

"GHOST TRAIN" HITS ITS TWENTIETH WEEK

There were few playgoers in the audience which last night greeted the 20th week of "The Ghost Train" at the Copley that seemed aware of the fact that two new faces appeared in the cast.

The newcomers were Margaret Mullen, a seventeen-year-old Arlington High School student, and Kathleen Fay, a newcomer from England. Both players acquitted themselves handsomely.

OPERETTA HIT, 'KATJA,' MOVES HERE NEXT WEEK

Dancing into the Shubert next Monday night is the fair Katja, latest of the Shubert series of musical comedy hits. A gay background, and coming with an unbroken record of four years playing between London, New York and Chicago.

BELLE BENNETT HAS TRIUMPH IN 'MOTHER'

The limitless number of the silent drama's staunch supporters who saw and admired Belle Bennett's touching performance in "Stella Dallas" are being thrilled anew by her splendid portrayal of "Mother," the current film at the Scollay Square.

Miss Bennett brings to her new role the same sympathetic understanding and the same good taste she displayed in her earlier success. The present film draws its action from a Kathleen Norris story that traces the trials of a modern figure of present day society—that of a mother who faces the problem of offspring dazzled by the modern quest for pleasure.

Mrs. Norris' narrative is a straightforward treatment of this subject. It makes a point in six reels of film and stops when it gets to it. There is no maudlin flow of sentiment, but it has a distinct emotional appeal that hits home while at the same time providing spirited entertainment.

J. Leo Meehan has handled the direction with taste, skill and full regard for the benefits of sound showmanship. There is one sequence in particular that cannot fail to stir an audience. It is of a train wreck, admirably photographed, when two rushing locomotives come together in a dense fog. This bit is one of the best film thrills of the year.

The supporting cast is well chosen and all the players give splendid accounts of themselves, especially Crauford Kent and Joyce Coad. "Mother" is an inspiring photoplay.

OLD OXFORD CUSTOM CHANGED BY ECLIPSE

Oxford, England, May 10 (A.P.)—Ancient Oxford University is proud of its age-old traditions, precedents and habits, and it has taken a solar eclipse to change one of them.

Five centuries, Oxford's commencement day has been unalterably scheduled for the last Wednesday in June. This year, however, the Wednesday falls on June 28, on which day there is to be a total eclipse of the sun. Consequently, the governing body of the university decided to postpone the commencement exercises one day.

FOG DELAYS LINERS DUE IN NEW YORK

New York, May 10 (A.P.).—Dense fog delayed the arrival of nine liners due at Quarantine today. The vessel left Savannah May 7.

age, worthy of the French blood which they shed willingly in the war.

Captain Charles Nungesser is well described as a "patchwork of bone and flesh and metal," a production of army surgeons.

WOUNDED 17 TIMES in the war, his body is fastened together in several places with metal joints. Both elbows are patched with platinum, a disc of aluminum covers a hole on the top of his skull.

His right ankle is more than half platinum, and there are four platinum patches in his legs. In addition, he carries various metallic patches inside his torso.

HIS FELLOW FLIER, Captain Coli wears a black patch over his right eye. A German machine gun bullet destroyed that eye during an air duel.

You may not even know the fate of these men when you read this. Successful or not, they are entitled to the immortality that high courage deserves. And there are thousands like them in France.

THE UNITED STATES has more smallpox than any country out of Asia. There were 33,752 smallpox cases in this country in 1926. The reason is simple. We have more smallpox because we have more cheapskates who oppose vaccination, which PREVENTS smallpox.

In Europe, where vaccination is intelligently enforced, ten nations had not one single case of smallpox in 1926. Eighteen nations had only 1,009 cases among them.

IT IS ENLIGHTENING to read that smallpox is more frequent where opposition to vaccination is strongest, Southern California and Northern England.

We had in 1926 six times as many cases of smallpox as Russia, with more population than we have. And in Russia, before Catherine II. was vaccinated, scores of thousands died of smallpox every year. The little boy that supplied vaccine for the Russian Empress, by the way, was finally created Duke of Smallpox.

SECRETARY MELLON, still busy with financial housecleaning, has called in the second issue of Liberty bonds, paying 4¼ per cent., and will pay on November 15. He does not feel that Uncle Sam should continue to pay such outrageously high interest.

CALLING THESE bonds will save taxpayers many millions every year. The taxpayers who hire Mr. Mellon to look after their finances for a salary less than that of a second-rate expert accountant have a bargain.

GOVERNOR FISHER of Pennsylvania vetoes a bill to protect bootleggers against being punished in both Federal and State courts, called "The Double Jeopardy Bill."

HOWEVER, bootlegging is an exceptional industry, with something of "double jeopardy" about it.

Bootleg whiskey, for instance, can make you blind immediately, destroy your kidneys soon and ultimately cause death. That's a TRIPLE jeopardy, and might justify double jeopardy for bootleggers.

GERMAN MONARCHISTS and imperialists that would welcome back the Hohenzollerns had a parade with iron helmets, four sons of the ex-Kaiser joining in the procession. Their chance of recovering the throne their father lost would be better if one or two of them had been killed, or at least wounded, when the fighting was on.

The Hohenzollern miracle that made the former Kaiser one man in Germany with half a dozen sons of fighting age, all coming out of the war without a scratch, can't be a very popular miracle.

HEADQUARTERS FOR BOYS' CLUB DRIVE OPEN FRIDAY

Headquarters for the workers in the campaign for $850,000 for the Boys' Club of Boston will be opened on Friday in the Boston Chamber of Commerce, it was announced today. Here the 700 or more workers in the canvass for funds for expanding and endowing the club will hold all meetings, and here will be located the clerical force to handle the routine work of the campaign.

The eleven division leaders have reported to Huntington H. "Tack" Hardwick, chairman of organization that eighty-seven of the 100 team captains had been recruited. The campaign will be formally open on Monday evening with a dinner at the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Rickard Promises to Sign Jack at Once If He Stops Maloney

By JACK CONWAY

New York, N. Y., May 10.—Tex Rickard today agreed to match Jack Sharkey directly with Gene Tunney and forget all about any further elimination bouts in the event the Boston heavyweight knocks out Jim Maloney in their 15-round contest at the Yankee Stadium on May 19.

Rickard revealed that plan to John D... [illegible] manager, during a... [illegible] at Madison Square Garden. Sharkey is coming to... [illegible] and will... [illegible] Rickard said:

"If he does that, I will call off my elimination tournament and sign Jack and Tunney for September." was Rickard's response.

"How about Dempsey?" pressed Rickard.

"In so far as Jack Dempsey is concerned," answered Rickard, "I have told Dempsey several times that Sharkey is entitled to a match with Tunney before Dempsey is considered. If Sharkey can put Maloney out, that will settle it. If he can match him with Tunney and Tunney will accept, Dempsey and the rest of the... [illegible] can go hang. I am not interested in Dempsey at present. Gene cannot keep on fighting forever and the public wants to see Sharkey and Tunney. If Sharkey can put Maloney out of the picture many people will be willing to be able to do as much for Tunney.

The boys in the know along Broadway believe Dempsey is all through and has no desire to box further. They contend that only a terrific money offer from Rickard would induce Jack to come back and fight.

Tunney is reported as adverse to taking part in a heavyweight elimination tournament. He has let it be known that if offered a match with Tunney, New York promoter, would rather see Dempsey, the first opponent the latter has ever had. Tex Dempsey who lost to Tunney, wouldn't have a chance of regaining the title.

Big Ballyhoo On Jim and Jack Laugh But They Collect

JACK AND JIM LAUGH AND COLLECT PROFITS

THERE is much applesauce connected with the rapidly approaching ring crash of Jack Sharkey and Jim Maloney. What is known as the ballyhoo is now being sprayed on the boys who read the sport pages to see what it's all about. Tex Rickard and those who advise him are a bit afraid that the Yankee Stadium may not be sold out on the evening of May 19.

Nick Flatley

Tex knows in his heart that it will be, but he doesn't mind giving his experts a chance to try out various sorts of publicity. It's all part of the game, just as the jewel and divorce stories are legitimate advertising for the beauties of the screen and stage.

The voracious Boston reader of sport news is discovering strange and weird things about the two Boston heavies, who are shortly to battle for a shot at Gene Tunney. The boys are finding out that James Maloney is being educated by Harvard professors and studying his head off.

They know that James would be about as glad to meet a Harvard professor as a Harvard professor would be to meet James and chuckle. But the idea goes over just the same. Young Mister Maloney has no desire to wear the high hat. His great ambition is to have enough money in the bank and invested in good Boston real estate, to let him forget worry and know that his family will be set for quite a few years.

The same boys read about Sharkey popping off and making threats. They know that is the bunk, too. Jack has one ambition—to get enough tucked away so that he will be financially fortified for life. He has a family, too, and wants the future of his flock to be insured beyond any chance of fortune.

Boston's two heavyweight contenders are unusual chaps for the prize ring. They don't sprinkle their language with "disses and "dats," and they don't want to take their winnings out to the blind tigers and make merry.

Jack and Jim are a couple of nifty, smart young business men. They fight because they can get more money that way than by chasing any other profession. They are real rivals, but only because it's good business. They show their smartness by falling in line with the ballyhoo stuff, but it makes them laugh just the same. Heavyweight fighting for a living is no joke, but the buildup is getting to be something else than serious.

It pays, though. There will be at least half a million in the Yank box offices when Jim and Jack get going. A cut in that much dough is worth any sort of buffoonery.

TY COBB'S WAIL MAY FORESHADOW FINISH

BASEBALL seems to be infected with the ballyhoo fever, as well as the ring game. Ty Cobb, suspended for a few days for roughing that would have earned life exile for a rookie, emits a tearful wail. He sees the sinister influence of peeters and schemers working against him.

Ty is getting old, and probably knows full well that he cannot keep leading the hitters and showing youth the way. His regeneration this spring will be chronicled with the all time marvels of sport. Ty can't cannot keep it up. Age is always waiting around the corner for the veteran, no matter what fire the old boy puts into his daily effort. The strained tendons and the offended muscles cannot stand the pounding.

The star who is slipping can never believe it. He has the urge, and feels that the old kick is there. When it proves to be missing, he cannot understand it. Cobb, finding out of the baseball picture, was tossed back into the headlines by the Winter scandal. He was lucky enough to get out in a glorious start.

The season stretches months ahead, however, and Ty is beginning to know that the scrap may get him. Wherefore his talk of plots and spies and machinations. Nothing on the stage of sport packs more tragedy than the sight of a star making his futile fight against the inevitable surge of youth.

SHIFTS IN HARVARD CREWS

Capt. Platt in Varsity Boat; Emmett Goes to Seconds; More Changes Planned

Coach Ed Brown has shifted the bow fours in the first and second Harvard varsity fours, and plans many more changes in the two boats before the next race on the Crimson schedule, a week from Saturday.

When the eights took the water for their first workout following the races with the Navy crews at Annapolis, Captain Jeff Platt was back in the varsity boat at number five and Bob Ladd, who was at number five, rowed at number three. Bill Emmett, who held down the latter seat in the race with the Middies has been shifted to number four in the second shell.

Captain Platt was late in joining the crew squad this Spring, having suffered from sinus trouble all Winter, but he is in good shape again and is expected to remain in the varsity boat for the remainder of the season.

The fight for the stroke position in both crews is still open, according to Coach Brown. Jack Watts, Kim Norton and Jim Perkins are wearing a merry battle for the berths.

Watts, who stroked the first varsity against the Navy, did not take part in the workout. He watched the practice from the launch while Perkins stroked the first boat and Norton toiled in a like capacity for the seconds.

Watts has had far more experience than either of his rivals but he lacks weight. Norton and Perkins are improving rapidly under the direction of Coach Brown and one of the other may win the varsity job before the next race.

Rain interfered with the workout but the mentor is not worrying as he has plenty of time in which to whip his crews into shape for the next clash. He plans to continue to experiment with his material all week and the lineups he finally decides upon will get down to hard work starting next Monday.

Gaw Shifts B. U. Nine for Game With Tufts

Boston University nine will attempt to avenge its early season defeat at the hands of Tufts when the teams meet at the Oval tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Gaw has made three important changes in his line-up and he feels that he now has a team strong enough to defeat Lee Jamison.

The most important shift is the promotion of Jack Argo, a freshman, from the second team to a regular job at second base on the varsity.

Glyn O'Brien has been shifted from second to shortstop, the position he played last year. The other change has been made in the catching department. Young Pickard, another freshman, has shown enough ability to be rated as first-string receiver.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

You have been told many times perhaps to "hit with the clubhead" in the forward swing. What this really means is that you should get the clubhead. At the right way, from the top of the golf swing, the clubhead should be delayed until just before the moment of impact. This is one of the toughest lessons to get to master. Until after the player comprehends it the rest is easy. By "delayed clubhead" is meant that you keep the clubhead away even with your hands in the back swing, as long as you can. Near the top of the back swing the club, turning over the top will pull up the angle in the wrists and fall into the right position for the return. The player must school himself not to hurry the clubhead with his wrists, but, instead, delay it just before this turning point is reached.

Flowers and Huffman Clash Here May 16

Another fistic gem has been clinched by Eddie Mack. The matchmaker of the Argonne Club has signed Tiger Flowers, the Georgia Tornado, and Sailor Eddie Huffman of California to meet in a 10-round bout at Mechanics Building next Monday night.

This fight looms up as the best for action that has been presented in Hub fistic months. In addition, Bostonians at last are going to get a glimpse at Flowers puts it against a man who has no fear of him and who is willing to stand toe to toe and swap wallops.

Flowers and Huffman have met before. They clashed on the Pacific Coast and Flowers narrowly escaped being knocked out. Twice Huffman had him on the floor for the count of nine.

Flowers is well known here. One of the greatest gate attractions that ever came to Boston, the Tornado is without a doubt the most popular figure in fistiana today in the opinion of Hub fans.

Huffman, too is popular here. In his last appearance he handed Pat McCarthy a lacing. And it occurred just after McCarthy defeated Frankie Fleming. Huffman is a product of the Navy and didn't start fighting until 1924. He has met all the topnotchers and four times he has fought main bouts in Madison Square Garden. His last fight last week was against King Solomon, whom he knocked all around the ring.

Among the men Huffman has met are included such stars as Jack Renault, George Chiquito, Tiger Flowers, Johnny Jasso, Ad Stone, Jack Denave, Young Stribling, Fred Jonsen, Tony Marano, Tony Fuentes, Captain Bob Roper, the late Jimmy Delaney, Pat McCarthy and King Solomon.

Forbidden Lips

By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON
AUTHOR OF "THE TAXI DANCER"

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

CHAPTER 31

A deep, tremendous silence fell for a moment between Jacqueline and the powerful Lupino, whose dark eyes had begun to glow with a slow, devouring fire. The room was perfectly still and, significantly, no sounds came from the other part of the sinister prison that held them walled in behind its concrete barriers. Red Suggs and his gang had gone, finally, and Jacqueline knew that they had closed the massive steel door which was the only means of escape behind them.

"You, Jacqueline, we've left civilization behind," Lupino said, his voice vibrating. "We might be the last two people left alive on earth—the rules of the game sort of change, don't they?"

His great fingers were toying with a metal paper knife on the top of the flat desk. Just a fleeting second Jacqueline looked at the sharp edge of the instrument which, unfortunately had been used to open letters, with the thought that in her hands it might possibly be a weapon of defense—if it came to that. But immediately she knew such an idea was ridiculous . . . she was literally in Julius Lupino's power.

He eyes regarded her steadily, a contemplative look of possession

I've often been surprised" he continued, "at the number of things I've wanted and got. When I was a kid I wanted money, and I got it. Then I realized I was ignorant and I picked up a piece of chalk and I started to write. I could have made a million dollars if I'd known then what I know now, but I learned many things. Right now I want you. I love you, Jacqueline, more than anything else on earth."

His words were uttered with impetuous calmness, but Jacqueline, reading him with a quivering intensity, realized that his mood was utterly lawless, that not only love, but its equivalent in violence was stirring in the desperate situation.

"You . . . you promised to protect me when I first went to work for you," she told him breathlessly.

"That was on the outside," he returned. "I didn't mean to make a game out there—other people made them for us, and those other people don't exist now, so the rules are off. They're off for me, and they're off for you, too. You're free to let yourself go."

"The rules are never off," she retorted desperately. "Other people don't make the rules, they spring up in the head, they're permanent—there's something you know deep inside you, and you can't sweep them aside."

"How about me?" Jules Lupino demanded. "How about the things I feel inside of me? You want me to sweep them aside—so you can have your own way? Well, I played the game out there, didn't I? And now I'm going to play it in here under the new rules. You know what I'm going to do."

She felt a scream rising to her lips, but she checked it. "Don't you come near me!" she gasped.

"I'm going to take you in my arms and kiss you all I please."

Jacqueline started from her chair, but before she could escape him Julius Lupino threw his arms around her and held her close and steady to his chest. She tried to struggle. The effort was no more than a flutter. With one of his hands he bent her head back and looked comminingly into her horrified eyes.

"Damn it all—I've got to have you, do you understand?" he said huskily. "You belong to me! I'll kill anybody for you! I didn't realize before I'd let you go—that's what you mean to me! You can't resist a love like that. You've got to return it, Jacqueline. You hate me, but that's the next thing to love—you do . . . love . . . me."

His face moved toward her by until a matter of inches only separated them; her right hand got free and she thrust the palm up under his chin, forcing him back.

"You brute . . . you vile beast! You brute . . . brute!"

A slash of meaning to her words penetrated Lupino's blazing sight and for a moment he relaxed, as though he had been stabbed with a dart of hot pride.

"Brute . . . Beast!"

Her words came through clenched teeth; the strength in her arm multiplied many times over, and with her hand under his chin she was able to force his head back.

Lupino was breathing deeply.

"When you cut out that kind of talk I'll do—you want you've got to say! The great, but his arms, more powerful than her own puny strength, held her helpless.

"You don't want me—all women are alike to you! Why in the name of God, can't you let me go—what difference does one woman more or less make to you?"

"Don't be a fool . . . you wonderful creature," he told her tensely. "You'll never find anybody else who loves you as much as I do—that take care of you all your life like I will."

She jerked away from him, and he advanced after her slowly.

"Come here." His eyes, now, were opaque pools of black fire.

In the tense swiftness of the passing second Jacqueline's eyes, like those of a cornered animal, darted around the room; she was nearer than Lupino to the desk—her hand reached a heavy bronze paper weight.

Suddenly . . . with all of her force . . . she threw it.

It smashed against his forehead between the eyes . . . all at once his face was very white, and then she saw him slowly stagger, crumbling to the floor.

ARE YOU DISCONTENTED, MRS. MARRIED WOMAN?

What is the reason you are not happy or contented with what you have, Mrs. Married Woman?

Why are you so dissatisfied all the time with what you possess?

Is it because you cannot bear the thought that someone else has more or better things than you have?

You don't want to admit that it is plain jealousy, do you?

Envy is a foolish state of mind.

To be sure you must have ambition.

You must look forward to greater things.

But if you can't enjoy a really good thing when you have it just because there is a better one on the market you are silly.

Then there is the point of having things in keeping.

If you have a clerk's income you should not expect to wear sealskin—it would look out of place.

If your ambition is to have things to out-do your friends or your neighbors, you need to revise your spirit.

But if you want things more efficient and in keeping, and an all round general uplift in circumstances, work for it, but don't make yourself unhappy about it.

Pickwick Papers

By Charles Dickens

MR. PICKWICK and his friends were invited by Mr. Wardle to spend a week at his home. They started out boldly and in high humor, but the horse ran away and smashed the cart and the four are but determined Pickwickians had to complete their journey on foot.

PLEASANT were the days spent at the Wardle home, especially for the romantic Mr. Tupman, who retired to the garden with the coquettish (and elderly) Miss Rachel Wardle and, embraced her fondly. But, alas, a certain Mr. Jingle visited the hospitable Wardle home.

SUAVE Mr. Jingle, the fortune hunter, persuaded Miss Rachel to elope with him. Mr. Tupman was heart-broken; Mr. Wardle, her brother, was furious. He and Mr. Pickwick set off in pursuit of the runaway pair, but their chaise broke down during a storm.

CONTINUING the pursuit, they caught up with the couple at a London inn, when one Samuel Weller, a servant, helped them to confront the fickle Miss Rachel and prevent her ill-advised marriage to the fortune-hunting Mr. Jingle.

DAILY SHORT STORY

WISE BABIES

By L. M. Blake

DINAH MOORE glanced up at Walter Larsen and frowned.

"Well, Larsenie," she said, tartly, "get some work over here, pronto! This is not a hospital for men afflicted with a strong sickness, but a factory. And that is our time mark-ing."

Larsen smiled feebly.

"Quite so, Miss Dynamite," he retorted diplomatically.

Between man and girl, clashes were a daily occurrence. These, coupled with Dinah's statement that Larsen was "so much poison" to her, together with the man's declaration that Dinah "blew up" every time he came near her, were the cause of much merriment among employes of the Oako factory.

Larsen had once been Dinah's "boy friend," but now the girl was keeping steady company with Bill Myover, dubbed by some "Leftover William."

Myover and Larsen were opposites. Myover was slender, but good looking, clever at playing the banjo, a good dancer, and an egotist. Larsen was rugged of face, retiring by nature, never knew what to do with his hands and feet and could not talk about himself.

Shortly after his employment at the Calco firm, Myover became infatuated with Dinah. Larsen innocently introduced the two, and, when Myover began calling regularly on the girl, Larsen said nothing, but quit the race.

"Funny, he didn't tell Bill Myover to beat it before he socked him up," Lotte Doran remarked shortly after that event.

Wait Larsen is a great, big coward," Dinah returned, and her black eyes seemed to snap. "I'll run him ragged from now on, believe you me!"

Dinah was a girl who lived up to her word.

Days later, during the noon hour, Dinah brought Tommy Flint, her nephew, to the factory to see the girls. It was the little fellow's second birthday and he was proud of it, or rather Dinah was proud of it for him.

The day was warm, with little wind. Almost two score of the Calco employes were sitting on boxes or stools outside the big freight doors. Larsen sprawled in his small flivver, at the curb.

Dinah hailed in the building's shade to talk to Lotte Doran and several of the other girls.

"He's two years old today," she announced grandly. "Isn't he big for his age?

"Sure is. And he's 'my man,'" declared Lottie. "Ain't you, Tommy?

"I dess so," the baby taped.

Billy Myover got up from his box and walked toward the group. He reached little Tommy's side as an automobile drew near to the freight door.

"Hey! There, Dinah," someone called.

The girl turned. Four men were in the machine; two in the front seat, two in the rear.

Tom Flint," Dinah muttered. "Drunk as usual."

But when the man beckoned, she went up to the car, little Tommy at her side.

"Hello, all," she told herself, "a father has some rights."

"Hello, son, how's tricks?" rumbled the man. His face was very red, and he moved unsteadily in the seat. He suddenly grew belligerent demanding.

"Where's my wife coming back to me?"

"Just as soon as you brace up and act like a man," Dinah returned coldly.

Tommy was climbing about the machine. Clumsily, the senior reached down, picked up the lad and handed him to a companion on the rear seat. Then he directed the driver:

"Give her gas, Steve. We've got what we wanted!"

Dinah jumped on the running board.

"What are you doing?" she cried "Give Tommy back to me!"

"Oh, yes, I will!" Tom Flint answered with a snarl. "I'll tell Helen for me that she can have Tommy back when she takes me back—not before!"

The machine started. Dinah hung on, trying to reach the boy.

With curses and rough hands, the man tried to force her off the running board. Finally Tom hit her a blow on the head, knocking her away from the car.

Employes of the Calco Company watched the affair in a sort of trance, making comments, but showing no action.

"I say! You can't do that!" Myover objected weakly; but he carefully kept from the side of the automobile.

Larsen could not believe his eyes until Dinah sprawled upon the ground. Then he quickly started his flivver, speeded it alongside, and recklessly crowded the big car close to the curb.

"What are you trying to do, lunkhead?" the driver bawled indignantly.

Larsen, with eyes blazing, said nothing. His first move was to knock the driver's head crashing against the windshield. Next, he grabbed the fellow near him in the rear seat, yanked him out of the car and hurled him to the ground.

Tom Flint half rose and lunged forward, swinging both fists. Larsen steadied the fellow with a left jab, then measured him with a right swing. The blow almost knocked Tom into the front seat, and ended the mix-up.

For the fellow by the driver had opened the door, leaped from the machine and dashed off as if pursued by some evil force.

Little Tommy, huddled and crying, looked up as Larsen took him out of the car.

"It's all right," Larsen said hoarsely. "Run to Aut.' Dinah."

The man on the ground struggled to rise. Larsen bent over, picked him up like a sack of meal, and dumped him into the machine.

Then Larsen roared at the driver:

"Tear out of here! If I get real mad—"

"Yes, boss!" the man said meekly as he sat in the clutch.

Larsen watched the car back up, swing out and speed away. Then he sauntered over to Dinah.

The girl, shocked but unharmed, had clambered to her feet. With little Tommy she became the center of an excited group.

"Brutes!" muttered Lotte Doran. "They ought to be flogged."

Larsen caught Dinah's eyes.

"Better let me take Tommy home," he suggested. "These fellows may come back and follow you."

"Please do that," Dinah answered. "I'm all upset—"

They were nearing the Moore home when Dinah noticed that Larsen's knuckles were skinned and bleeding.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed. "You're hurt!"

"Hurt?" Then Larsen saw what she meant. "Bosh! A little iodine will fix that."

Dinah nerved herself and questioned:

"Walt, why—why did you quit calling on me?"

Larsen twisted uneasily in his seat.

"You seemed to prefer Myover. And I didn't want to be in the way."

"You could have made Myover let me alone. I know that now. . . . Why didn't you?"

The surprise in Larsen's face was genuine.

"I never thought of it," he admitted. "You can choose your own friends. I haven't the right. Of course, if he should insult you—"

Dinah's voice took on a pleading note.

"Won't you call tonight? Helen will want to thank you."

"No," Larsen replied. "I'd feel like a fool and act worse."

Tears blurred Dinah's eyes.

"If it you can't—now," Larsen went on as he stopped the car, "we can go to a movie together."

"Oh! Walt!"

"Just we two," he warned.

Dinah nodded fiercely. "Myover never did count," she said unevenly. "You know that, didn't you?"

"Well, I was almost sure of it—else there would have been no excuse for your ragging me the way you did."

"You must like me a little bit to feel like you did, for me," Dinah breathed softly.

"I told you long ago what I think of you. And I haven't changed."

"I was silly, Walt."

"Maybe you and me, both, Dinah. Anyway, as Lottie Doran would say, we're 'wise babies' now."

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

NOW that the nice weather is here, thousands of motorists have started out on their Summer detours.

A BOSTON fellow has just left on a trip to San Francisco. He bought two cars, one for pleasure and one for loss.

YOU can purchase an automobile on the installment plan and it'll be paid for by the time you get through Kansas.

SOME of the roads out here are so woodsy that the turtles walk on stilts.

A LOT of children have had to sell their scooters and buy tractors.

TRANS-CONTINENTAL tourists never think of using maps. If they happen to get off the road it's a pleasure.

ONE man noticed that his car was riding smoothly the other day and when he looked out he discovered he was in the ditch.

HE came across a rut in the highway that was so large he thought they'd arrived at the Grand Canyon.

HE traveled over a ten-mile stretch of road that was so rought it knocked three payments off his car.

MOTORISTS have to creep along so slowly that they could use century plants for stoplights.

THE law will let you go thirty miles an hour, but the roads won't.

THE highway in one of our Middle Western States is so bad that even the airplanes have to make detours.

WHEN it rains, the mud sticks to your automobile. The authorities arrested one guy last week for carrying their roads out of the State.

HE scraped the dirt off his fenders and sold it to a fellow for $100. He told him it came from Florida.

ONE guy started digging his car out of the mud the other day and ran across the covered wagon.

THERE'S one thing you've got to be thankful for. You never have to worry about traffic officers pulling up alongside of you. Most of the speed cops have sold their motorcycles and are now riding turtles.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS---BY HELEN ROWLAND

NEVER try to crowd yourself into a man's heart when it's already full. His heart may be like a subway, in which there is always "room for one more"; but why get into the crush—and get hurt?

Never take "the Road to Yesterday!" It is almost as tragic to lose the sweet memories of a dead love as to lose the love itself; and autopsies are always disillusioning!

* * *

Never write him a sentimental note on the morning after a thrilling evening. It is like offering stale champagne to a man with a "hangover."

Never take "the Road to Yesterday!" It is almost as tragic to lose the sweet memories of a dead love as to lose the love, itself; and autopsies are always disillusioning!

* * *

Never write him a sentimental note on the morning after a thrilling evening. It is like offering stale champagne to a man with a "hangover."

* * *

Never take a man's love-making seriously after he has had the third drink. He knows only that SOMETHING is making the world go 'round—and of course he thinks it's love!

* * *

Never try to hurry a man into a proposal of marriage. A woman's love may spring up like a flower; but a man's love grows by the slow process of geological formation.

Never conclude that your heart is so badly broken that it can't be mended, or your heartache so deep that it can't be cured. Try planting a garden, buying a new hat, or plunging into a new flirtation. These are nature's best antidotes for love-sickness, wounded vanity, and sprained illusions.

* * *

Never kid yourself that the man who doesn't telephone you for a whole week is "afraid to." When a man has even a mild interest in a woman, the only thing on earth that he is "afraid" of, is that one may escape him.

* * *

Never ask a man if he loves you. He may forgive you for asking him to lie for you, steal for you or murder for you—but never for asking him to love you!

* * *

Never believe a man when he says that it is "business" that is keeping him away from you. Nothing ever kept a man away from a woman except ANOTHER woman, or the lack of a desire to be with her.

* * *

Never return more than half a man's kisses. "Enough is too much!" as Abe Potash said. And in love, "enough" is ALWAYS too much!

Never fool yourself into thinking that the man who is deceiving another woman in order to be with you, is going to be perfectly loyal to you when he is with another woman. Men run true to type!

* * *

The Soft-Boiled Virgin will find the road to love and marriage far smoother and pleasanter, if she will read these simple little traffic rules. They are as good today, as they were when King Tut went courting—and as they will be a thousand years hence!

KEEP YOUR SCALP Clean and Healthy WITH CUTICURA

FOR Acid Stomach PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion, or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

Better Than Soda

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this sour-ing waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

Try a 25c Bottle

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Company and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

CAR LOADINGS OVER MILLION MARK AGAIN

Loadings of revenue freight, despite the Mississippi flood and the bituminous miners' strike, exceeded 1,000,000 cars for the week ending on April 30, according to American Railway Association.

Revenue freight loading totaled 1,026,440 cars. This was the fourth time so far this year that loadings in any one week had exceeded the million-car mark. The total for the week was an increase of 71,225 cars over the preceding week this year, substantial increases in the loadings of all commodities being reported, except coke, which showed a slight decrease.

The largest increases over the week before were reported in the loading of miscellaneous freight, coal, grain and grain products, ore and merchandise and less than carload for freight.

Compared with the corresponding week last year, the total for the week of April 30 was an increase of 21,032 cars, while it also was an increase of 12,267 cars above the same week in 1925. Miscellaneous freight loading for the week totaled 295,414 cars, an increase of 9,344 over the corresponding period last year, and 36,784 above the same week two years ago. Coal loading totaled 183,683 cars, a decrease of 4053 from the same week in 1926, due to the strike of bituminous miners, and an increase over the corresponding week in 1925.

Truck Hauling Contract

THE MAYFLOWER CORPORATION is the largest company shipping household furniture in the world. We have 70 vans and once two more met to complete our fleet of trucks operating out of Boston. At once we want must be in a position to make a reasonable money payment on a lease. We arrange to finance the balance due. No brokerage or finder's fee is charged. Also lease a work contract with our company that provides for a large amount of work over a long period of time. A connection of this kind is seldom offered, and ours is a reliable company, having a record of several years' successful operation. We maintain offices in Boston and fourteen other large cities. Time is too short for correspondence. Call in person and we will gladly explain how good and profitable our proposition is. RED BALL TRANSIT CO., 652 Little Building, Boston.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN BOSTON MAY 10, 1927

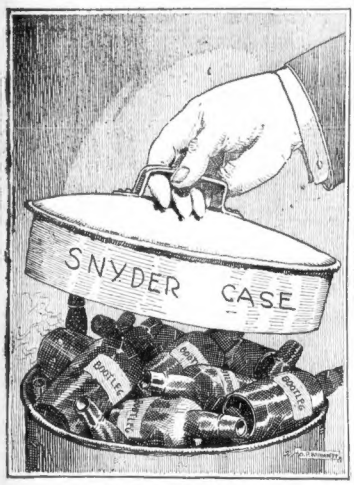
THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

The Third Accomplice

When Do We Take Up the Case of the People vs. Bootleg Liquor?



THE SILENT WITNESS

Ruth Snyder is adjudged guilty of the murder of Albert Snyder, her husband. Judd Gray, her accomplice, is doomed by the same verdict.

Unfortunately the third accomplice, bootleg liquor, cannot be tried and executed.

Bootleg liquor was at the first meeting of Gray and Mrs. Snyder in the restaurant on Thirty-sixth Street, New York.

On a sea of bootleg liquor they launched the leaky bark of their adulterous honeymoon last Summer.

Bootleg liquor was present and active in every conference they held. Bootleg liquor suggested, urged and elaborated every plan they made.

Bootleg liquor accompanied Gray to procure the sash-weight, the gauze, the chloroform, the picture wire.

Bootleg liquor stood behind the man and bolstered him up to go to Albert Snyder's empty house that fatal night of March 19.

With a quart and a half of bootleg liquor Gray steeled himself to the dreadful deed. When it was done, reeling with more bootleg liquor, he stagged down to the cellar to burn shirt, nightdress and bathrobe.

He returned upstairs to still more bootleg liquor, to plot the burglary story and leave his paramour bound in the rummaged house.

With bootleg liquor he kept his normal senses drowned on the railroad journey back to Syracuse.

He was still drinking bootleg liquor when the detectives came for him at 3 o'clock next morning.

The record reeks of bootleg liquor:

"She kissed me and said it was so good to see me again. I laid the small bottles out for her. She brought a large bottle and gave me two drinks. I left the small bottles open on the shelf, and we went into the living room and talked.

"It was at the hotel. I was quite intoxicated when I came in. She asked me if I would think she was terrible if she confided a secret in me of doing away with her husband.

"She said that she did not believe in God, which led to further argument over this point. As I say, I was in a semi-intoxicated state.

"She said she felt so good that she felt like getting plastered. She had about three drinks, I had about the same. She fainted away.

"After I had had four or five highballs, she asked me if I could help her by shooting her husband.

"She kissed me and had a bottle of whiskey in her hand, with about half a pint. I think I drained the bottle, if I am not mistaken. She asked me if I could do the job that night.

"I went over to the pillow and found the sashweight, the pliers and a bottle. I would say probably a four-ounce bottle. Then I found a quart bottle alongside the chiffonier between the bed and the chiffonier. I know I took three or four drinks . . . I probably had five or six more drinks to steady my nerves.

"Q.—When you drank this liquor you knew it was liquor and you were drinking it for a purpose, weren't you? A.—I never would have been able to go through with it if I had not drunk liquor.

"Q.—Mr. Gray, is there any day that you know of in connection with this case that you didn't drink? A.—No, sir, nor any other day since I have known Mrs. Snyder."

When do we take up the case of the People vs. Bootleg Liquor?

GOD. The eternal spirit of goodness and justice that dominates all events and pervades all things.

Law. The right of way.

Righteousness. That course of conduct that invariably and in the long run produces happiness.

Wisdom. Adjusting one's self to law.

Fool. One who expects happiness in violation of law.

Courage. Placing adherence to what is true and right above personal pleasure or safety or life itself.

Faith. Confidence in the eternal cosmic laws of goodness, that they are stronger than anything evil, and that it pays to commit one's self wholly to them.

Passion. Feeling that rises to the point of dominance.

Purity. The elimination of selfishness from passion.

Pride. The morbid overestimate of self; moral autoinfection.

Charity. Love operating upon judgment.

Humility. The normal attitude of a healthy mind toward itself.

Sympathy. Feeling another's suffering or pleasure as if it were one's own.

Chastity. The intelligent choice of and preference for the finer over the coarser pleasures of life.

Forgiveness. The elimination of all sense of offense at another's action toward us.

Honor. A high sense of what is right and wrong, held in regard to one's own judgment and without regard to the opinion of others.

Love. The inspirational effect of one personality upon another.

Religion. The personal influence of God and of the god-like in human beings.

Temperance. Self-control, the last and greatest of all virtues, the regulating virtue, producing poise and order in one's life.

Repentance. Sorrow over wrong of which we have been guilty.

Tolerance. Hospitality of opinion, a willingness to allow others the liberty of thought we want for ourselves.

Patience. Sustained endurance of what is unpleasant, without petulance.

Organization. Unity of service among a number of persons in order to attain a common desired end.

Patriotism. Such devotion to one's country as tends to make it of greatest benefit to the citizens of it and to humanity in general.

Death. That cessation of the sensible phenomena of life.

Soul. The word applied to the personality of a human being implying that it is in reality spiritual and not material.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

FAD.

THE little dog or cat you see Milady carrying on the street, tucked snugly under her arm, causing you to wonder where and when the world is coming to end, to which you think it is fast slipping—is nothing more than a plush pocket-book shaped in the form of domestic friends of the canine or feline family. In it are carried cosmetics, a purse for change, a dainty handkerchief and whatever else Milady desires. It is the newest novelty. It comes from across the water.

RETORT.

In JAMAICA PLAIN, MISS HELEN SULLIVAN, kid sister of a well-known beauty, and herself one, as well as a skilled wearer of feminine foliage—brought home a hat one from a certain BOSTON millinery department where she had been shopping. A somewhat austere clerk greeted a not-too-wealthy-appearing customer with the pointed remark: "We have nothing valued under $18, madam." The woman never hesitated. "Present company excepted," she said sweetly.

ADVICE.

Few people realize Newbury street boasts of a night foot clinic. Pedalric ailments of all kinds and description are treated. Dr. Joseph Leipold is in charge. For the girls, there is advice on how to beautify the ankles, slenderize the limbs, prevent bunions and other horribles of the lower extremities.

VISITORS

Early morning workers passing through the COMMON were surprised to see three wild ducks in the FROG POND. Inquiries from a policeman disclosed nothing further than that they had come down sometime before dawn and were as much a surprise to him as to anybody else. They remained in the Hub's historic pool until nearly eight o'clock, when they circled aloft and headed due north.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I FEEL so much bigger than I am.

Always there seems to be a tall, shining Self within me which does not fit my limited and often peevish personality. A wisdom, which hammers against my ignorance, longing for outlet. A tenderness which presses against my selfishness as a flower presses against a cruel clod. A Bigness which cannot make its way through my shabby Littleness.

For example—there's this business of Intolerance.

I detest intolerance. I know perfectly well that there isn't the least excuse for it. I know, to the last pitiful detail, why people do wrong, weak things. I know how far-reaching are the causes of such acts — how helpless most culprits are in the grip of circumstances — how deeply we must stand in need of charity. I know all these things, and I have a reverence for tolerance and an abiding hunger to be tolerant.

And yet—

I'm continually being intolerant.

Something will shock me, someone will injure me, and instantly I'm all aprickle.

Yet all the time deep down inside broods a Self whose eyes are always tender and understanding. But that Self seems to be trapped by the pettiness of Me.

That's what I mean when I say that I feel so much bigger than I am.

There are other things too—shabby unpleasant traits which make up the outside me which people know. Greed, envy, conceit, selfishness, cruelty—I am those things —outwardly. But in my own soul I detest these things.

I do not want to be these things. I want to seem through clear and shining and kind. But instead I come through all gummed up with static.

I am like a wretched little receiving and broadcasting set which picks a beautiful song out of the air and mangles it in transmission.

The song to begin with was pure music. But somehow in passing through Me, its music was hurt and distorted.

That has happened to you, too, hasn't it? You, too, have honor and beauty and shining pride in you which you never seem able to express. You, too, must often feel like a shabby machine which cannot broadcast the perfection it receives.

I wonder if there isn't a deep, spiritual truth in that.

I wonder if the Real Us isn't infinitely greater and finer than the Us the world knows.

Maybe we really are noble, spiritual expressions—soul wave lengths —which come from far but which pass imperfectly through the clumsy machines of our ignorant minds and frail bodies.

Did you ever think of your body in that way, as a make-shift machine—and of your soul as a destitute, quailing song which seeks expression.

It makes things seem different if you do. You're not so easily discouraged.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Men have feeling; this is perhaps the best way of considering them.
—Richter.

No man is wiser for his learning —wit and wisdom are born with man.
—John Seldren.

Not to know me argues yourself unknown.
The lowest of your throng.
—Milton.

When we see the dishonor of a thing, then it is time to renounce it.—Plutarch.

The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple to thy soul with hooks of steel.—Shakespeare.

There is a gift beyond the reach of art, of being eloquently silent.
—Bovee.

Do not delay;
Do not delay; the golden moments fly swiftly.
